Thousands Brave Rain For View of 1950 Homes

22 New Residences Scattered Over D. C. Area Opened for Month-Long Exhibit

(Pictures on Page B-1)

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

The rains came—and so did thousands of undaunted area residents to take a look at 22 brand new "Homes of '50" yesterday.

Take a look? They toured the one-story houses from stem to stern, the multi-story houses from basement to attic. They were at front doors two hours before the scheduled noontime opening. They were still coming at dark.

And—in many instances—they liked what they saw so well that they bought it.

This was the beginning of the "Homes of '50" exhibition. From yesterday forward, daily and Sunday for a month, the model houses are open to inspection. There's no charge for admission.

Visiting hours are from 2 p. m. to dark on weekdays, and from 10 a. m. to dark on Saturdays and Sundays.

Scattered About

Scattered throughout greater Washington, the 22 homes represent the finest built here this year. They are typical of what is available in architectural styles ranging from colonial to modern, and in prices from $9990 to $53,500. Seven of them have been completely furnished.

Biggest turnout reported yesterday was at the Jonathan Woodner home near Seven Corners, Fairfax County, Va. Victor Inoff, of Peerless Modern House which decorated the home, figured that 10,000 persons passed through.

Builder Henry de Longfief estimated about 3500 home-conscious Washingtonians toured his Sleepy Hollow, Va., house between noon and 4 p. m.

It was the same elsewhere. There was a "steady stream" of visitors to John R. de Sibour's Georgetown colonial row house at 3343 Reservoir rd. nw. Cars lined Georgia ave. extended for blocks near the modern Cape Cod built by James F. Hogan and Gelman Construction Co's. brick rambler.

Goes Up In An Hour

Hundreds watched Reliance Homes of Washington, Inc., erect one of its prefabricated houses in something like an hour. The demonstration was put on a short distance from the firm's model house in Annandale.

The month-long "Homes of '50" display is being presented by 22 builders, seven furniture stores, and The Washington Post. Back of the big show is the sponsors' belief that the best in mid-

Government Cargo Valued at $55,000 In Stolen Truck

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10 (AP).—A truck-trailer carrying a sealed $55,000 Government cargo was stolen early today while the driver was in a restaurant, FBI agents reported. The truck was en route from Norfolk, Va., to Philadelphia.

It was recovered about an hour later, abandoned. The seal on the rear door had been broken, but whether any of the cargo was stolen awaited an inventory by Government officials.

Lacy Wood of Norfolk, the driver, said he was traveling without a bill of lading.

Last week, Mr. K. of Bethesda discovered that Washington Post readers are early birds when it comes to answering classified ads.

He placed a three line ad in The Post to sell an electric range, a roaster and some miscellaneous furniture. By 9:30 of the morning the ad appeared in The Post—everything was sold!

If you have appliances or furniture that you no longer use—why not turn them into cash? All you have to do is dial NAtional 4200 and ask for classified. An experienced adwriter will help you word your advertisement for best results.

Autos Stalled on Flooded Road

By Armstrong—The Washington Post

DOWNPOUR—Flood waters swirl past stalled cars at 42d st. and Benning rd. ne., where the heavy rainfall made a veritable lake of the roadway. Many motorists, particularly in the northeast part of the city, were trapped at flooded intersections

Street Floods Cripple Traffic In District

Motorists Trapped And Cellars Filled During Heavy Rain

The District last night bogged down under the day's 2.8 inches of rain.

Motorists, particularly in the northeast areas, were trapped at flooded intersections.

The Nats' second ball game was canceled, and the Marine Corps Band concert at the Watergate—in honor of John Phillip Sousa—was postponed until 8:30 p. m. today.

Heavy winds that preceded the first rainfall put an end to the last heat of the last shell race in yesterday's President's Cup Regatta.

Police had numerous calls because of flooded cellars, and wires were down in the center of the city and in the nearby Maryland counties.

But nowhere was there more trouble than at 42d st. and such intersections as Benning rd., Division ave., E. Capitol st. and Minnesota ave.—all Northeast.

Extra Police Called

The water was hubcap high at least. Sightseeing youngsters were marooned in their bus until a police crane towed them out. Extra police details were assigned to keep motorists out of the area.

A harbor police boat and two-man crew was ordered to stand by in the area after they had been called to remove three families marooned in high water. Soon after the call, however, the waters receded and the unidentified families waded out.

Residents of the Queenstown, Md., housing development, Queens Chapel rd., said the water level at intersections in their area was three and four feet high.

Car owners simply pushed their cars onto the sidewalks and hoped the waters would recede. The 1000-unit site thus was virtually blocked off for auto travel.

Takoma Park police last night reported the Carroll ave. bridge was two feet under water. Carroll ave. is a main thoroughfare in the nearby community.

A bridge culvert on Sargent rd. near Emerson st. ne., was washed away.

An unidentified woman notified authorities her car was marooned

Three others on the sidewalk—the girl's sister and two adults who were accompanying them—also were injured. Police, however, could not determine last night whether it was the taxicab or the auto which struck the taxi that injured the others.

All four were walking home after attending afternoon church services.

7 on Raft Saved After Navy Plane Falls in Pacific

PEARL HARBOR, Sept. 10 (AP).—A Navy transport plane, her fuel tanks empty, was ditched in the Pacific near Midway Island today but within three hours all seven men aboard were rescued.

The Hawaiian Sea Frontier reported a PC boat picked up the seven men from a life raft tossed about by 12-foot waves.

The four-engined R5D Douglas Skymaster, Navy counterpart of the Air Force C-54, still was afloat on the choppy ocean when the PC boat arrived.

The PBY spotted the big plane and the life raft, then directed the PC boat to the spot. The rescue craft, PC1145, headed for Midway with the survivors.

Blasts Cut Off Current in Alexandria

Electrical Explosions Rock City, Interrupt Power Service in Area

A series of electrical explosions at a Virginia Electric Power Co. substation jarred downtown Alexandria yesterday morning and cut off power for nearly an hour to breakfasting Virginians as far away as Occoquan.

Explosions, beginning at 8:24 a. m., took place at the company's Jefferson and Paine sts. substation.

The electrical tieup blacked out most of downtown Alexandria, all of Fairlington and Parkfairfax, plus several buildings in Arlington Village, and the area south of Alexandria—including Bellehaven, Hollin Hall, Hollin Hills, Fort Hunt, and Occoquan.

A Virginia Electric Power Co. official said explosions began as workers attempted to isolate the substation from its main feeder power line to do some routine maintenance work at the station.

As they tried to cut the substation from the line, he said, the cutoff switch "arced" into the explosions Alexandrians heard for blocks.

Late Sunday sleepers living nearby were jarred from slumber by the first explosion, which was rapidly followed by several more.

Witnesses said sparks showered about the substation, and yellow and blue flames played about the shorted feeder line as clouds of smoke rose.

A few minutes after the first string of explosions, there was one final loud report, nearby residents said.

The Alexandria Fire Department sent three fire units from No. 1 and No. 5 companies racing to the scene. There were no injuries.

Minister Helps Catch Him

Snags Lewis' 84-Year-Old Dad Saved by Neighbors in Plunge

Isaac Lewis, 84-year-old father of William (Snags) Lewis, alleged gambler, was saved from possible death or serious injury Saturday night when two neighbors caught him as he plunged from his second story window.

Lewis, who suffers from diabetes, had a dizzy spell and walked to the window of his brick house at 1713 7th st. nw., for air, he said yesterday.

Lying on a bed and speaking with difficulty, he told a reporter he recalled that he sat on the window sill, but did not remember what happened after that. It was about 11 p m.

Someone on the street saw him there and ran to call the Rev. George D. Mims, an evangelistic preacher who operates a cleaning shop and also lives at 1711½ 7th st. nw., next door.

Mims, who has known Lewis 15 of the more than 60 years that Lewis has lived there, shouted: "Lewis, you get back in." When Lewis remained at the window, Mims sent for a ladder and told a passerby to call the police, he said.

Mims and an unidentified resident of the block stayed under the window, and when they saw Lewis swaying, they held out their arms and caught him as he fell. Lewis' back touched the pavement Mims said, but a doctor who arrived in a Health Department ambulance could not find even a bruise on the aged man, who weighs about 150 pounds.

Lewis was taken back to his bed. His sons, "Snags" and Jacob Lewis, who has an auto finance agency in the same block, were summoned.

Asia Assured By Acheson Of U. S. Aims

Not 'Written Off' But Main Efforts Must Center Now On Europe, He Says

By James E. Warner
NYHT News Service

The United States definitely has not "written off" Asia, but its "major effort at the present moment" must go into creating strong North Atlantic defense forces, Secretary of State Dean Acheson declared last night.

On the eve of conferring with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on European defense before going to New York for conferences of the Big Three foreign ministers on Tuesday and of the North Atlantic Pact Council on Friday, the Secretary spoke on a CBS television interview.

His emphasis on Atlantic defense had been underscored Saturday by President Truman's assertion that United States forces in Europe must be "substantially" increased, and by the fact that Atlantic and European armament, including that of Western Germany, will be one of the top subjects at the New York conference.

"It is very hard to put our major attention anywhere," Acheson said, "but I think we must put our major effort at the present moment into creating strong North Atlantic defense forces. If we have those forces—united, balanced, collective forces—strong, well-equipped, able and ready to deter aggression, then problems all over the world take on a different shape. Such forces alone will change problems in Greece, in Turkey, in Yugoslavia, in the Middle East and the Far East."

As for the time it will take to build such a force, Acheson said: "It isn't going to be a short effort and it isn't going to be easy. And it is going to be done in a period which is going to be dangerous."

Acheson emphatically rejected the thesis that war with Soviet Russia is inevitable. This thesis had been reported by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York in a speech Friday as having been told to him by persons who said the total war might come this month. Governor Dewey added that he did not agree.

The Acheson remarks were not an answer to Dewey, for the Acheson-CBS script was written and distributed on Friday afternoon, hours before the Governor spoke.

"This whole idea that war is inevitable," the Secretary said, "seems to me to be completely wrong and very vicious . . . The goal for which we are struggling is to settle, so far as we can, the great differences between the East and West. To settle those differences we have got to talk on equal terms. We cannot have

Acheson Gives Formula For 'Bearing' Attacks

Secretary of State Dean Acheson said yesterday he "bears up" under the attacks of his critics by following the advice of an old Scottish lady.

In his television interview on world affairs, he quoted the old lady as counseling a friend in trouble:

"My dear, you have got to be philosophical about this. Just don't think about it."

Steel His First Task

Harrison, IT&T Head, to Direct Regulation of U. S. Production

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Commerce Secretary Sawyer announced yesterday the establishment of the National Production Authority to be headed by William Henry Harrison of New York.

Harrison, 58-year-old president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., will take over his duties today as administrator of the Government's priority, allocation and inventory control program. Immediately after taking the oath of office he will meet with 21 steel company executives to set in motion plans for voluntary allocation of steel to essential users.

The new regulatory agency was established by virtue of the Production Control Act of 1950, only 24 hours after President Truman announced he had ordered its creation. The act authorizes NPA to set up compulsory regulations for establishing priorities and allocating scarce and critical materials. Sawyer said yesterday the agency would go slowly in the exercise of its powers which would cut into production of automobiles, home appliances, television sets and the like.

"We shall use these powers," he declared, "only as it becomes necessary."

But at the same time he expressed the determination of his department and the NPA to take whatever steps appeared necessary in spite of unfavorable reactions. He acknowledged that "we are not engaged in a popularity contest" and promised that:

"Our efforts will be to undertake a constructive but not timid

9-Cent Boost In Pay Given By Studebaker

Five-Year Contract Calls for Quarterly Cost-of-Living Review

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 10 (U.P.).—Studebaker Corp. granted 21,000 workers a new five-year contract today calling for an immediate boost of 9 cents an hour. Studebaker was the last major auto maker to fall in line with a general wage increase in the industry.

The Studebaker offer came after three months of negotiations. It was accepted by a standing vote of members of CIO United Auto Workers Union Local 5 in a mass meeting.

The agreement also provides an annual wage increase of 4 cents an hour for each of the five years and further adjustment geared to the cost-of-living index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Studebaker thus followed the lead of major producers in Detroit—including General Motors, Chrysler and Ford—who have raised wages either through contract adjustments or voluntarily in an apparent bid to insure labor peace in an emergency period of scarce employment.

The contract provides for a quarterly review of wages in line with the cost of living, as does the General Motors pact.

Red Staff Chief Reported Killed At Korean Front

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Moscow Radio announced tonight that Kam Gen, Deputy Minister of National Defense and chief of the general staff of the North Korean army, "died at the front on September 8."

The broadcast, quoting a Tass news agency dispatch from Pyongyang, North Korean capital, gave no details of his death.

It said he was one of the organizers of the North Korean Communist army and was "the closest militant friend" of North Korean Premier Kim Ir Sen. Kam Gen, it added, was a member of the central committee of the Labor Party and a deputy in the Supreme National Assembly.

D. C. Marine Helps Rescue South Korean

Corpl. Lester Dives Into Sea in Effort To Save Dying Pilot

A Marine corporal from Washington and an Air Force captain dramatically pulled a dying South Korean pilot from his Mustang, which crashed into the sea at the beginning of the first attack mission of the rejuvenated South Korean Air Force yesterday.

Corpl. Lester

Corpl. Edwin Lester, 27, of 325 6th st. se., and Capt. Jack Weiner, 36, of Atlantic City, N. J., dived underwater to drag the unconscious fighter pilot from the cockpit, the Associated Press reported.

Weiner, the first of 50 rescuers to reach the scene near a forward airstrip in South Korea, had previously made three underwater dives to smash the cockpit open. The pilot died two hours later.

It started as a proud day for the South Korean Air Force. Two fighter pilots who had flown for the Japanese in World War II had been checked out in American Mustangs. After a few reconnaissance hops, they were ready for their first attack.

Capt. D. G. Crowell of Portland Oreg., leader of the mission, took off without incident. But as the first South Korean plane roared halfway down the runway, it veered, cartwheeled and crashed into the sea.

Lester, a native of Memphis, Tenn., had been a crew chief at the Quantico air station for the past couple of years. A combat veteran of World War II, he left Washington on July 8.

His wife, Mrs. Susan Marie Lester, lives at the 6th st. address.

'Foe' Drives Yanks Back

Gen. Clark Watches as West Begins 'Biggest' War Games

HEIDELBERG, Germany (Monday), Sept. 11 (AP).—Nearly 100,000 American, British and French troops went into action today in one of the biggest training maneuvers in occupied Germany since the war.

For a week they will practice how to repel an attack by superior forces invading Western Germany from the east.

Military observers from all Atlantic Pact nations will watch the American-led maneuvers for indications of how Western troops might fare if this theoretical attack should become reality.

Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of United States field forces, came here to inspect the "combat readiness" of American troops in Europe.

It will be a realistic test, involving tanks, planes, artillery, simulated paratroop drops behind the front line, and actual airlifting of reinforcements from as far away as Trieste.

A cavalry regiment of American troops dressed in green uniforms provide actual physical competition for the trainees by playing the role of aggressor.

In keeping with the actual comparative troop strength of the Western powers and Russia in Germany, the "defending" forces will be outnumbered more than two to one.

Officials said the maneuver was planned last winter, "long before the Korean fighting began," and described it as a routine part of the normal training program.

The maneuvers began with American troops stationed near the Czech border falling back westward toward a prearranged defense line, fighting delaying actions as they "retreated."

General Clark predicted that the additional United States troops approved by President Truman yesterday probably will begin arriving in Europe within a few months. He said he expected they would be located in western Germany.

He said he could not say how many new troops will be sent.

From the maneuvers, Clark will go to Austria and Trieste to inspect American troops there, then to England to discuss training methods with his British counterpart.

He has been directed, he told correspondents, to make a special report on the combat fitness of American troops on his return to Washington.

Already Fed Up

GIs Feed, Then Make Prisoner Of Wrong-Way Tank Leader

By Peter Kalischer

YONGCHON, Korea, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—A North Korean "wrong-way Corrigan" drove his tank into Yongchon today, was given lunch and then was captured when he drove the wrong way again in an attempt to escape.

The tank commander led a small detachment of Communist infantry into town. The infantrymen, too, were given lunch and then formally made prisoners.

Earlier this morning, the South Koreans captured an enemy tank about four miles north and west of Yongchon. When they saw an identical tank—15 tons, mounting a 76-millimeter gun—coming down the road toward town, South Korean troops thought it was the captured one.

The tank got all the way into Yongchon with the infantrymen. It parked in a schoolhouse yard. There, it and the tank crew and the infantrymen were finally identified as an enemy force.

The South Koreans surrounded and disarmed them and then gave them a hearty lunch. Lunch over, the formalities of making the North Koreans prisoners of war were conducted. But the tank commander made a break, leaped into his tank, and roared off northward.

He picked the wrong road. A detachment of South Korean bazooka men set off after him in a jeep, remaining respectfully out of range of his powerful gun. The tank roared on—only to run into

First Cavalry Area Firm; Expected Major Enemy Blow Fails To Develop

TOKYO, Sept. 11 (AP).—United States First Cavalrymen today beat back two Red Korean attacks north of Taegu where more than 40,000 Communists are massed for an impending drive on the northwest anchor of the United Nations defenses.

The attacks were preceded by a heavy artillery barrage on American positions 5 miles north of Taegu. The roar of the big guns could be heard in the city.

One North Korean suicide charge drove troopers from one defense position, but the cavalrymen quickly regained it.

The threatened big push by the Reds still was awaited at midmorning.

A United States Eighth Army spokesman in Korea said the front north of Taegu looked better than it had in several days.

Eight Die in Strafing

Nervous civilians in Taegu had a scare early Monday when a lone fighter plane made four strafing runs over the city killing eight civilians and wounding nine others. The plane later was identified as American, flown by a pilot who confused the Allied base for Red-held Kumchon, 30 miles westward.

In the east coast sector the Reds pushed Allied forces back slightly southwest of the enemy-held port of Pohang, but late field dispatches said South Korean Republican troops counterattacked and regained the high ground.

Between those two centers of action, the South Korean Second Corps moved northeast two miles in a continuing attack that began Saturday southeast of Yongchon.

It was there that the South Koreans and elements of the United States Twenty-fourth Infantry Division Saturday sealed a dangerous five-mile gap that Red tanks had torn in the United Nations defense perimeter.

Resistance Disorganized

General MacArthur's war summary early Monday said the United Nations' advance in the Yongchon area was against "disorganized enemy resistance."

Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commanding the Twenty-fourth Division, told AP Correspondent Bem Price Sunday night that the northern front situation was now "not bad at all."

Church said the area north of the now-repaired gap was "rugged country" with no roads, "and there are not many Reds in there."

On the western front southwest of Taegu, a single North Korean company attacked early Sunday

Rhee Hints U. N. Forces Will Clear All Korea of Foe

WITH U. S. 24TH INFANTRY DIVISION, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—President Syngman Rhee of the Korean Republic predicted today that the United Nations armies would have the Communists on the run by the end of the rice-harvesting season next month.

Rhee intimated the big Allied counter-offensive toward the north was imminent and said it must not stop until the Reds are driven entirely out of Korea—into Communist China or Soviet Russia.

"All Koreans are clamoring for going back—back up north," Rhee said. "My observation is that we are about ready to go."

Rhee made this statement at a press conference here in the key Kyongju area with Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commanding the Twenty-fourth United States Infantry Division and other U. N. troops, beside him.

Early Action Seen On 7 Billion Tax Bill

By The Associated Press

Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee said yesterday Congress soon will go to work on a "second installment" tax-boosting bill to collect about 7 billion dollars more.

The aim is to put America's defense program on a "pay-as-we-go" basis, as advocated by President Truman Saturday night.

This 7 billion dollars would be in addition to the $4,523,000,000 tax increase now awaiting final congressional action.

George, together with Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee, Chairman Taft (Ohio) of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, and other lawmakers already had made statements that taxes should be adjusted so far as possible to put the Korean war and the general armament against Communist aggression on a pay-as-we-go footing.

George told newsmen he expects the "second installment" bill to collect about seven billion dollars as follows:

1. A four billion dollars to six billion dollars corporation excess profits levy.

2. Widening of the excise tax list, which now applies to such items as furs, jewelry, luggage, cosmetics, movie tickets, and telephone bills. New items on such a list might include various goods that people can do without in an emergency.

3. Possibly a transaction tax on a limited basis. Such a tax would apply on exchange of goods.

4. Closing of more tax law loopholes that now permit some individuals and corporations to pay less taxes than others, because of the way they make or use their money.

5. Taxing building and loan associations, co-ops and mutual savings banks, if a satisfactory way can be found to do it. Congress probably will not apply the ordinary corporation rates here, as to businesses organized for a profit.

George said he does not expect the second installment bill to make another boost in individual income tax rates, and it may not increase ordinary corporate rates again.

The bill now pending, increases the taxes of over 50 million individual taxpayers by about $2,700,000,000 a year, takes another $1,500,000,000 from corporations and picks up more millions by various other tax law changes.

Increased individual rates are effective October 1, while the corporation boost applies to half of 1950 income.

George said: "I believe the deficit for the current fiscal year ending next June 30 will be no more than two billion dollars to 2½ billion dollars. In addition to the increased tax rates, the expanding economy will account for much larger tax colletions."

Doughton said that if the economy goes to a 300-billion-dollar basis, as the President predicts, he believes it would be possible to get up to 10 billion dollars more in taxes.

To Aid U. S.

Educational Units Plan For Defense

Organization of a permanent National Conference for Mobilization of Education was completed yesterday by representatives of 80 educational groups after a two-day meeting at the Statler Hotel.

Purpose of the organization is to aid cooperation between American education and the defense program.

Willard E. Givens, 4329 Blagden ave. nw., executive secretary of the National Education Association of the United States, was named chairman of the group's executive committee.

The National Conference for Mobilization of Education is designed as a clearing house for defense information and manpower policies. The group plans to work with the U. S. Office of Education in an advisory capacity.

Primary concern of the organization is how to deal with military and industrial programs which might be set up as they were in World War II.

The group recommended immediate provision of operating funds and a voice for education on civilian defense boards.

Officers named in addition to Givens were:

Vice chairman, Edgar Fuller, executive secretary, National Council of Chief State School Officers; secretary, J. Kenneth Little, director of Student Personnel Services, University of Wisconsin; coordinator, J. L. McCaskill, associate secretary, Department of Higher Education, National Education Association.

When the 13 contestants peeled off most of their clothes, the judges looked twice and decided doe-eyed Ebbe Adrian, 19, of Gottenberg, Sweden, was "too innocent and immature."

They picked 23-year-old Hanni Schall of Vienna, whose 35½-inch bust and curving hips earned her the nickname of "The Beautiful Vase."

Miss Austria won the title and $5250. Miss Italy, 18-year-old Giovana Pala, received second prize of $1830 and Miss Sweden third prize of $660.

Born in Wilson, N. C., he had lived in this area since 1936 and attended the Fairmont Heights Elementary School in Prince Georges County. He is the son of Mrs. Mary E. Williams of the K st. address.

Private First Class Hinnant enlisted in the Army January 1, 1948 According to his step-father, Dallas Williams, the Defense Department wire said he was killed in action August 23.

Williams said Hinnant, who had served with the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division, was an only child.

In the same casualty list, the Defense Department announced that Sergt. Nathaniel McCall, 32, nephew of Mrs. Emma L. Jones of 1626 15th st. nw., had been wounded in Korea.

Mrs. Jones, his next-of-kin, said Sergeant McCall arrived in Korea August 20 with the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment, was wounded five days later. She said a subsequent letter from him declared the wound was "not serious."

Sergeant McCall was born and raised in Leesburg, Fla. Neither of his parents is living. A Regular Army soldier, he enlisted eight years ago during World War II, served in the New Guinea area and reenlisted at the end of the war.

Meantime, the Defense Department listed a Virginia and a Maryland man missing in action. They are Pfc. Kenneth L. Lam, son of Louie A. Lam of Strasburg, Va., and Pvt. George D. Ferguson, son of Mrs. Lettie Rexroad of Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Also included on the list as killed in action were these Virginia men: Corpl. James Whisman jr., son of James Whisman of Staunton, Va., and Corpl. Alton Whittaker, son of Mrs. Mary W. Whittaker of Fredericksburg.

Residents Told Not to Flee A-bomb Attack

Washington residents yesterday were warned not to "try to get out of town" in the event of an atomic bomb blast.

The warning came from Engineer Commissioner General Gordon R. Young, who said that those who try to escape would be "sitting ducks" paralyzed in streets "solidly packed" with cars.

General Young said he was afraid that unless people are properly educated about precautionary methods in atomic warfare, they will "obey their natural instincts and try to escape. That mustn't happen," he said.

The Engineer Commissioner said one of the jobs which Inspector John R. Fondahl, newly appointed acting director of civil defense, must do, is to educate the public on how to protect itself in such an emergency.

General Young said the best advice he could give to anyone threatened by an atomic blast is to "take the nearest and best cover." Everyone should remember, he said, that an atomic blast does not penetrate underground as did the blockbusters of the last war.

"My cellar is an air raid shelter," said General Young. He said shelters underground should be reinforced by props, where possible.

If Washington were threatened by an atomic blast, he said, we would get "advance warning" from the radar system already in place in the East. He said one of the problems which the civil defense setup must solve is how to sound the warning, once it reaches Washington.

In the $290,000 appropriation request for civil defense here which has been rejected by the House of Representatives, there were funds to operate a central control board from which such a warning could be sounded, General Young said.

During the last war, he said, military leaders estimated a siren would be needed for each of the District's 70 square miles of territory to provide full warning protection. General Young said he did not know whether sirens now manufactured could be heard over a wider area.

He declined comment on merit of a proposal which the Commissioners are considering to silence police, fire and ambulance sirens except in an air raid. The proposal has been adopted by New York City. It will be discussed by the commissioners on Tuesday at a conference with fire, police and communications officials.

General Young said that every resident of Greater Washington should be educated in the "little precautions" which are necessary in the event of air warfare here. He said that at the sound of an alert, residents immediately should fill containers with water in their own shelter as provision against the city's water supply being knocked out.

Another "little precaution," he said, would be to have a flashlight or candles in the shelter selected by each household, and to keep heavy objects off wall shelves to lessen danger of persons being hit by falling objects.

Nurses Chart Service Needs

The Graduate Nurses' Association is making a survey of more than 3500 graduate registered professional nurses in the District to help meet civilian and military demands, Miss Marie Wallace, association president, announced yesterday.

The survey was planned by the American Nurses' Association Committee on Nursing. Questionaires should be received within 10 days, Miss Wallace said.

The questionnaires are to be filled in and returned to the association headquarters, 1720 M st. nw. Any nurse who does not receive a questionnaire in 10 days should notify the association, Miss Wallace said.

Miss Wallace recommended that each state nurses' association keep a roster of graduate registered professional nurses to aid planning for adequate nursing care for civilians and the military.

Social Hygiene Group Pleads With U. S. Not to 'Entice' Immature Girls to Jobs Here

An eloquent plea to Federal officials not to entice young girls in the hinterlands to Washington in this war by promising them the "life of Riley," only to have them end up as unmarried mothers, was voiced yesterday.

Everett

The entreaty came from Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society.

Noting that the Defense establishment and other Government agencies are stepping up their programs as the result of the Korean war, Everett urged them not to repeat the mistakes of World War II.

"Many girls were brought here from their distant homes and Uncle Sam wasn't much of a guardian for them," Everett asserted. Too many of them became v. d. victims and unmarried mothers."

Appeal to Patriotism

In the home town, Everett said, the process in World War II went like this:

"A good-looking young officer in a fresh uniform addressed a graduation class and said: 'Come to Washington and live the life of Riley. Girls, your country needs you.'

"They were promised adventure, glamor and patriotic service—an unbeatable combination."

What too often happened once the young girl got to Washington, he charged, is illustrated by a case from his files:

"A nice kid comes into my office. She's living with a couple of other girls. They're lonesome.

"One Saturday night they walk down Fourteenth street and run into some sailors. 'How about a drink?' the sailors say. 'Fine,' the young girl says.

Fooled by 'Old-Fashioneds'

"She's not used to drinks when they order, she looks around for something on the menu that sounds mild and picks an 'old-fashioned.' 'You picked a beaut,' I later told her. She has two or three old-fashioneds and she spends two nights with the sailor. When she comes to me she has gonorrhea."

In another World War II case he handled, Everett said, a 22-year-old girl was left both syphilitic and pregnant.

The main trouble, he said, in pleading "Let's don't let it happen again," was that some girls who came to Washington to work for the Government in World War II were "unstable."

This, coupled with the fact there are "not enough boys to go around here," was asking for trouble.

To such unstable girls, he said, an incident he witnessed one day in a park at 15th and K sts. was an invitation to disaster.

"There were two sailors and two girls," Everett related. "None of them looked over 16 though they must have been older than that.

"I heard one of the sailors say, 'Now, we're going overseas in a day or two and this may be your last chance to do a good turn for your coustry as far as we're concerned.'

"They made a date for that night. I have no idea what happened."

Everett admitted that Washington has done much in the last year to "clean up the high percentage of rape cases."

"Nevertheless," he added, "it is not pleasant to have so many."

Specifically, he urged psychologic and psychiatric tests be given girls in the home town before okaying them for Washington jobs.

"With a better sifting process made effective at the place of recruitment," he declared, "the more unsteady youngsters could be left at home where they're under parental and home-town supervision.

"If wide-scale recruitment of office personnel again becomes necessary, more efficient screening and less ballyhoo are two items worthy of consideration."

Memorial Day Marked By Clashes

BERLIN, Sept. 10 (AP).—Communist demonstrators observed German Memorial Day today by clashing with police in three west German cities. The police arrested 68 of the demonstrators and cracked a few heads.

The Communists, mostly blue-shirted youngsters attacked the police with stones and fists in Berlin, Frankfurt and Darmstadt. Ten Communists were arrested in Frankfurt, 37 in Berlin and 21 in Darmstadt. Twenty-seven of the Berliners were released after only short detention. In other German cities observance of the day went off quietly.

The Communists claimed one of their young woman demonstrators was taken to a hospital here with head lacerations, though injuries generally were minor.

In Berlin, rival memorial ceremonies were held honoring the victims of Nazi concentration camps. Allied West Berlin celebrated quietly. Joined by the commandants of the western occupation powers, West Germans laid wreaths and heard speeches.

But about 600 young Communists started to march from their west Berlin homes to an "international memorial and peace demonstration" in the Russian sector.

They defied a police order to break up their unauthorized march. When police tried to enforce the no-parade order, the marchers threw stones. Police retaliated with clubs and scattered the demonstrators.

In a second, smaller skirmish a group of Communists attempted to seize policemen and drag them into the Soviet sector to beat them up. This group also was routed.

A similar clash occurred in Frankfurt, in the American Zone, where a Communist-sponsored memorial demonstration had been prohibited. About 200 Communists tried to break through a police cordon around Memorial Suare. Assailants were dispersed.

The Communists marched about 25,000 into Lustgarten Square for the East Berlin demonstration sponsored by the Communist-controlled "Victims of Fascism" organization. Police had roped off a six-block area to hold an overflow crowd which never showed up.

Speaker after speaker reiterated charges that the United States was committing aggression and war crimes in Korea and that "Anglo-American imperialists are rearming Western Germany for aggression."

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said yesterday, on the eve of the Big Three meeting in New York, that the United States should not send more troops to Western Europe until the Korean war is won.

But other leading senators indorsed President Truman's decision to send "substantial" United States troop reinforcements to Europe on condition the Atlantic Pact Allies match them with larger armies of their own.

Details of the joint program for strengthening Western Europe's defenses against possible Soviet attack will be worked out by Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman in meeings beginning in New York Tuesday.

Acheson will meet behind closed doors today with Connally's committee and members of the House Affairs Committee to outline United States proposals. He is expected to say this country favors a unified Western European army, with a limited number of German divisions, and possibly with an American commander of the stature of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. He also may favor some form of German rearmament.

While Mr. Truman did not indicate how many United States troops should be sent, informed military quarters said the goal may be 10 divisions by next year. Present United States strength in Western Germany is one full division plus attached units, totaling about 75,000 men.

Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of United States field forces, told reporters in Frankfurt, Germany, yesterday that the United States troop reinforcements will arrive in Europe this winter.

Connally told the United Press he is concerned that an early buildup of American forces in Europe might spread this country's troop strength too thin.

"At the moment," he said, "I am more concerned with getting troops to Korea. In 1951, the war in Korea doubtless will be at an end and we may then send additional troops to Europe, with the distinct understanding that European countries must do their part."

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), an American delegate to the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly meeting, said the U. S. troop offer should be coupled with concrete plans for rearming Western Germany.

Senator Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.) agreed tht "Western Europe cannot stand up to Russia without German participation."

Red HQ Burned In Serb Village; 25 Peasants Held

PUDARCI, Yugoslavia, Sept. 10 (NYHT).—Communist headquarters in this Serbian village was burned down in the middle of the night recently and about 25 peasants have been arrested, it was learned today.

It is hard to learn from the peasants the exact facts about the burning. They do not want to talk. However, information pieced together from conversations along roadsides and in the field indicates that after the fire the Communists promptly cleared away the charred ruins. Only four peasants were arrested in Pudarci and three of them have been released.

But two others were arrested in Kamendo, a mile to the east; 16 from Drazanj, a mile and a half southwest; and a few more in Umcari, less than a mile away.

The incident may have importance as an indication of exasperation observers have found recently among peasants in areas where the grain crop is poor and Marshal Tito's regime still is exercising pressure for compulsory delivery of wheat and corn to the state.

India Backed For China's Seat on U. N.

By the United Press

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said yesterday he would "like to see" Nationalist China replaced by India on the United Nations Security Council.

Sparkman, recently named a United States delegate to the U. N. Assembly, was interviewed on the National Broadcasting Company's television show, "Meet The Press."

"Personally I would like to see China taken off the Security Council," he said in response to a question. "China is not very stable now. In fact I would like a very careful U. N. study of the entire Chinese question. I don't regard either side as proper representatives of the Chinese people."

This referred to the bitter dispute over whether Chinese Nationalists or Communists should hold China's permanent seat on the Security Council.

Sparkman said he opposes letting Communist China become a member of the U. N., but he would not go so far as to recommend a United States veto to block any proposal to seat the Chinese Reds.

He also said the future of Formosa, Chinese Nationalist island stronghold, should be left with the U. N.

The Senator was questioned about rumors that President Truman favors setting up a coalition cabinet of Democrats and Republicans to insure national unity in the war situation.

Sparkman said he knows nothing about the rumors, but said he would favor the idea "if the President decides it is time for such a decision."

Turkey Shuts Border With Red Bulgaria

ISTANBUL, Sept. 10 (AP).—Turkey closed her frontier with Communist Bulgaria today. Informed sources said the action was taken to stop the influx of political refugees who have been slipping into Turkey at the rate of 200 a day.

Most are Bulgarians of Turkish origin, many of whom probably will be repatriated later under Bulgaria's recent offer to permit 250,000 of them to return.

At present, however, Turkey is not organized to care for a flood of refugees.

Pravda Says U.S. Plans War Of Prevention

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP).—Pravda accused President Truman and the United States Government today of carrying out step-by-step plans to unleash World War III—to be entitled "preventive war."

Pravda, Communist Party organ, said in a leading editorial the President's latest radio speech was one more effort to prepare American public opinion for "new war adventures planned by Wall Street bosses."

The paper declared that American bombing of Chinese cities and "the groundless attack of 11 American planes on a Soviet airplane" fitted into President Truman's plans for broadened aggression.

Pravda said the true essence of the President's plans was blurted out by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews and Harold E. Stassen in calls for preventive war against the Soviet union.

(President Truman ordered General MacArthur to withdraw a statement to the Veterans of Foreign Wars that Formosa was vital to America's Far East defenses and must remain in non-Communist hands. The President repudiated the recent Boston speech of Matthews in which the Navy Secretary said the United States should proclaim its willingness to start a war if necessary to compel cooperation for peace.

(Stassen, who is president of the University of Pensylvania, and a Republican, said Russia should be notified that war will be carried directly to her soil if "Communist imperialist forces" launch further aggression anywhere in the world. He said this should be done by congressional resolution and petition to the United Nations Assembly.)

"The adventurous course of the rulers of the United States is pushing the country into open war," Pravda said.

Japanese Brace For 2d Typhoon Brewing at Sea

TOKYO, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—The people of Tokyo boarded up windows and nailed down doors of their matchbox-like houses today as forecasts warned a typhoon more murderous than "Jane," which last week took an estimated 500 lives, was building up in the ocean south of Tokyo.

The new typhoon, named "Kesia," carries a lethal combination of 111-mile-an-hour winds and heavier rains than any in recent Japanese storms. "Kesia" was spotted about 900 miles almost due south of Yokohama today.

The central Meteorological Observatory said "Kesia" will approach and perhaps hit Tokyo sometime after midnight early Tuesday. Of the possible routes the typhoon can take, observers believed the most probable was through the Tokyo-Yokohama area.

'Don't Try Test'

Red Marshal Calls Soviet Tanks Best

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (AP).—Marshal Semyon Ilyich Bogdanov of the Soviet army declared today Russian tanks are the best in the world. If any warmongers have a doubt of this, he continued, they had better not try to test it in practice.

Writing in the magazine Ogonek on the occasion of Soviet tankmen's day, Marshal Bogdanov added:

"If American warmongers force a war on humanity it will be their last war. The unconquerable Soviet army, educated by Soldier of Genius and Leader of Humanity Stalin, will bodly enter the last and decisive battle. The hate of honest and patient people will explode with a strength greater than any hydrogen bomb and the rotten underpinnings of capitalism will break down for once and all."

In his discussion of tanks the Soviet tank leader declared that in Korea "the peoples' (Communist) army has driven horror into the hearts of the regular American divisions. Truman's blitzkrieg turned out to be a fantasy. The Americans cannot be helped by their anti-tank jet guns, bazookas nor rapid-firing artillery nor jet fighters nor Superfortresses."

King Shields U. S. Girl From Photographers

BIARRITZ, France, Sept. 10 (AP).—King Farouk took his mysterious American girl friend to a party last night but shielded her from photographers.

Tsaldaris Asked to Form Government

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 10 (AP).—King Paul gave Constantin Tsaldaris, Populist (Royalist) Partyleader, a mandate to form a new government today.

Later, the King summoned Tsaldaris and Liberal Leader Sophocles Venizelos, who resigned today as Premier, to the palace for talks. It was understood the monarch insisted the two leaders form a Populist-Liberal coalition with the possible participation of Social Democrats.

The name of Constantine Rentis, Liberal stalwart, bobbed up as possible candidate of the Liberal, Socialist and Progressive Union parties. These three formed the center coalition government of Nicholas Plastiras which collapsed three weeks ago.

Liberal Party Leader Sophocles Venizelos handed in the resignation of his caretaker cabinet today, but the King rejected his recommendation parliament be dissolved and new elections called. The present parliament was elected only in March. The Venizelos government was the twentieth since the liberation.

The King said efforts should be made to form a new government before new elections are restored to.

Parliament, by a vote of 124 to 106, defeated the caretaker government in its first test yesterday.

It is expected Tsaldaris will endeavor to form a coalition with liberals and other "Nationalist" parties under the premiership of a nonparliamentary personality

Seven deputies from each of the three parties which formed the government of Plastiras met today to discuss possibility of reviving the coalition under Rentis.

Rentis has held half a dozen ministries at various times. As minister of public order, he smashed the Communist underground.

Hungarians Learn of New Catholic Ban

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 10 (AP).—A pastoral letter read in the churches today informed most Catholics for the first time that the government has dissolved all but four of the country's religious orders.

A government decree of September 7 dissolved 63 religious orders and ordered about 10,000 nuns and monks returned to regular civilian life. The decree has not been published by the government-controlled press here. The four orders exempted are to supply teachers for eight schools nationalized by the government in 1948 but returned to the church under a concordat concluded with the Bench of Bishops on August 30.

Under the concordat the Bench of Bishops, highest authority of the church in Hungary since the sentencing to life imprisonment of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, agreed to "acknowledge and support the Communist government.

Red Restrictions Cut East Zone Church Work

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—German church officials here said today that the number of empty Evangelical pulpits in the Soviet Zone has grown to more than 1000 and that new Communist restrictive measures are expected in October which will weaken the East Zone church still further.

The officials said that although the Communist East Zone regime has not banned the church directly, conditions are "about like they were under Hitler."

French City Gets Copy of Liberty Bell

ANNECY, France, Sept. 10 (AP).—United States Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder today presented this French city with a replica of America's Liberty Bell "as a sign of our determination to continue working together for world peace."

Communists boycotted the ceremony, held in the picturesque square of this Alpine city.

Snyder said "It is the hope of the United States that you will look on this bell as a constant reminder of our common faith in democracy . . .

"It is intended also to recognize anew a great bond which exists between the peoples of France and of the United States—the mutual devotion to the cause of human freedom."

Snyder expressed America's thanks to the famed beel founders of Annecy for producing replicas of the Liberty Bell for each of the 48 states as part of the United States Treasury's annual savings bond drive.

One of the bells was given by the people of Annecy to the people of Independence, Mo., President Truman's birthplace.

"The President commissioned me to bring you his thanks and the thanks of his fellow citizens of Independence for that gracious act on your part," Snyder said.

The bells were made in the 154-year-old bell foundry of Georges Paccard. It was chosen because it still uses a centuries-old wax process, the same as that used in the making of the original American Liberty Bell in 1776.

Some 1500 spectators cheered as the one-ton gift bell was rung for the first time. Snyder was to return to Washington from Geneva by plane tonight.

Everything at Steak!

WE were literally swamped with good entries in our little slogan "contest" to help promote the cause of bigger tips for taxicab drivers. Picking a winner was difficult, but now that it is all over, I'm confident that you will agree that first prize was richly deserved by Mr. Jackson Schlesinger, of 2807 Connecticut Avenue, for this little gem of poesy:

Twenty cents is no more than fair
To tip the fellow who gets you there!

Mr. Schlesinger, a native New Yorker, is a Supervising Clerk in the Department of the Interior, and has been a resident of Washington for 10 years. On Thursday evening of last week, he appeared, resplendent with a bright new tie, escorting the charming Mrs. Schlesinger, to claim his award. Their feast consisted of Manhattan cocktails, crackly-cold Jumbo Shrimp in a cradle of icy lettuce, with cocktail sauce; tender, juicy filets mignon (one medium rare, one medium well-done) heaping platters of French fried potatoes and French fried rings of sweet Bermuda onions; a bottle of Navalle Rose (Inglenook Vineyard's superb "pink" wine); hearts of lettuce salad with Roquefort cheese dressing; Parchey's famous deep dish apple pie a la mode, coffee and to top it all off, a flavorful B & B apiece. "I like the food, and I like you!" said Mr. Schlesinger, as he pushed back his chair and sighed contentedly. I'm happy to report that we like the Schlesingers, too. Come again soon. 19th at K St., N. W.

The reactions to our "contest" were not unmixed. Several entrants wrote that they would willingly tip more, if the cab drivers gave a little more service. As one friend eloquently put it: "If the cabby's tip-take lags, he can step it up by helping with his passengers' bags!" This bit of free verse expresses the sentiments of many, and I pass it along for what it's worth.

Oysters "R" in season again, and I'm glad to tell you that the first shipment of this year's crop just received from Crisfield, Md., is the best I have seen for many years. The Chesapeake, for my money, continues to provide the most succulent and flavorful of these delicious bivalves. The kind we favor are the medium-size Lynnhavens. They're big enough for stewing and frying, and they're tender and delicious on the half shell. Why don't you come in and enjoy a platter, prepared your favorite way? On Fridays, we make a specialty of a Fried Oyster platter (for only one dollar thirty-five) that includes a heaping platter of French Fried potatoes, a dish of Chef Wilbur Smith's incomparable cole slaw, the roll basket and a beverage. If you're especially hungry, I suggest that as a prelude to this meal, you treat yourself to a steaming bowl of delicious Parchey clam chowder. You'll say that it's silly to travel all the way to the shore for a seafood meal, when you can get such a delectable one for so little at 19th and K Sts., N.W.

Regular customers Oscar Kreutz and Harold Braman brought a newcomer to our establishment as their guest the other day. This distinguished gentleman was none other than Mr. J. Weekley and Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Sandre, who came with Mrs. Lillian Sandre to celebrate here their 57th wedding anniversary!

In case anyone has told you that a dollar isn't worth anything these days, I'd like to remind you that our Platter No. 2, Chopped Tenderloin Steak, has not gone up in price, and that a dollar still buys it. Here's what you get: the rich, lean meat of a fine, tender, perfectly-aged tenderloin, chopped, not ground, to just the right consistency in our own kitchen. This is shaped into a generous patty, dipped into Chef Heller's famous seasoned searing sauce and then broiled to your exact order. It's served to you, smothered in a rich sauce made of tender strips of sweet Bermuda onions, sauteed in creamery butter and flavored with a dash of fine wine. You're also served a generous platter of golden brown, French Fried potatoes, crispy-dry and crackly-hot, and an ample dish of our secret-recipe, creamed-in-buttermilk cole slaw. The famous Parchey roll basket and plenty of fine Brookfield butter complete the meal, which I warrant is the most delicious dollar's worth you've had since the last time you partook of this very platter! Remember our address? It's 19th at K, N.W.

Two Attacks by Reds Repelled Near Taegu and drove American Second Division troops off Hill 115 northwest of Changnyong. The Americans counterattacked and recovered the height three hours later.

The Reds were reported making a buildup along the Naktong River facing that Second Division area, but no further ground action of consequence was reported Sunday.

On the southwestern front, four small but sharp attacks early Monday were reported by Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton. They were directed against American infantrymen who clung stubbornly to heights three miles south of the confluence of the NAM and Naktong Rivers.

The rest of the Twenty-fifth Division front was quiet. The Reds still held Battle Mountain, 37 miles west of the main U. N. supply port of Pusan. The Reds regained it Saturday. It has changed hands 13 times in less than three weeks.

Air Force Has Good Day

The U. N. air arm took advantage of the return of good weather Sunday to send out about 550 sorties. Excellent results were reported.

The United States Fifth Air Force flew more than 500 sorties, a Far East Air Force summary reported, adding that planes were in the air again Monday morning in good weather.

The Fifth's 500 sorties were in support of ground troops, most of them in the frontline areas. They concentrated on the northern front.

North Korean positions and equipment in the Kigye and Pohang area were heavily hit to knock off balance the dangerous thrust which the Reds have curled around mountainous passes and boxed-in valleys to stab at the rear supply roads feeding Taegu in the northwest.

Four Red Tanks Hit

Royal Australian Air Force Mustangs gave close support to British and Scottish troops southwest of Taegu on the Naktong River. Results were not disclosed. One British company has been cut off and supplied by airdrop in this sector.

On the Taegu front, airpower knocked out two tanks and damaged two more in the First Cavalry sector, south of Waegwan.

North of Taegu, North Korean shells started to fall Sunday night at the village of Chilgok, five air miles north of Taegu.

AP correspondent Jack Macbeth reported the Red artillery fire was coming from points two miles north of the American positions. American First Cavalry defenders put up light counter-battery fire.

"We have reason to believe this is a preparation for an attack," an American staff officer told Macbeth.

The shelling started after First Cavalrymen opened a small Sunday attack to gain more favorable defense positions.

While action stirred ominously north of imperiled Taegu, Korean Reds sent about 800 men in battalion strength southeast from Waegwan toward defense positions in another threatening move. Waegwan is 13 miles northwest of Taegu. This movement again posed the threat of flanking and encirclement—the favorite Red tactics.

The North Koreans have had four divisions—at least 40,000 men—committed to the Taegu front, but for weeks they have been thwarted by the First Cavalry Division's alert defenses, aided by strong air support.

A headquarters spokesman said, "We do know they have suffered considerable losses and we know, too, there is some confusion among them." The spokesman, however, was not able to confirm reports that the Reds had 20 Russian-built tanks back of the front-line positions in the vicinity of Kasan, a walled town a dozen miles north of Taegu.

Adding to Taegu's peril was the growing size of a Communist buildup some 18 miles southwest, in the Hyonpung bridgehead area.

An Eighth Army briefing officer reported the Reds were crossing the Naktong River at that point "in large numbers" in what appeared to be the start of a major buildup."

This bulge was on the north flank of the United States Second Division.

Last week, the Second Division contained Red break-through attempts across the winding river front farther south.

On the far northeastern sector, the Pohang Airfield, 6 miles south of that former United Nations anchor point, remained in American hands as of noon Sunday.

Allies Still Hold Airstrip

A spokesman for General MacArthur strongly denied a Communist radio claim that Red troops had captured the airstrip. He said airstrip defenses were strong enough to repel several thousand attackers.

Tokyo headquarters said the Reds had pressed American and South Korean troops back on high ground southwest of Pohang and got control of an 8-mile stretch of road leading southwest from Pohang to Angang.

A field dispatch three hours later, however, said counterattacking South Koreans regained heights in that vicinity. It apparently was a more recent development of the same action.

Evidently also reporting on the same operation, the North Korean communique, broadcast from Pyongyang and heard in Tokyo, said Red units had broken through the Allied defenses in the mountains west of Angang. It asserted fierce Allied counterattacks with plane and tank support had been repulsed with more than 1000 Allies "put out of action."

North Korea Asks U. N. To Halt U. S. Bombing

LONDON, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—North Korean Foreign Minister Pak Hen Yen has asked the United Nations to take "urgent measures" to halt the "barbarous" American bombing of North Korea, Moscow Radio said today.

The broadcast said Pak made the request in a note to the U. N. Security Council and Secretary-General Trygve Lie on September 7.

Pak's note included a long list of towns bombed by American planes and listed heavy damages. It said the city of Chongchin, with a population of 120,000, was 90 per cent destroyed.

"American imperialists, embittered by their defeats on the front, are destroying with great effrontery Korea's industry and killing the peaceful population," the note said.

"As a result of constant bombing by American planes all villages and small towns in the southern part of Korea as well as a number of populated points along the main roads of North Korea have been destroyed to their foundations."

GROUND ACTION—Arrows locate areas where action was reported in South Korea today. In the central sector there were indications of a build-up for a new Communist drive on Taegu as the Reds shelled American positions near Chilgok, five miles north of Taegu. Southwest of the important defense base the Reds were reported reinforcing their Naktong River bridgehead at Hyonpung. In the east coast sector the North Koreans gained slightly southwest of Pohang, but the South Koreans gained two miles northeast of Yongchon. On the southwest front there were no fresh reports on the fighting that has raged near Haman, west of Masan a regiment of South Koreans who stopped him and made him prisoner.

The bazooka team drove up and claimed the tank as its prize. The first angry words of the day were exchanged between the bazooka men and the infantrymen who stopped the tank.

Capt. Gerald M. Woolcock, Bloomsburg, Pa., senior American adviser to the regiment, was called in to adjudicate but declined. He explained that the South Korean government offers a prize of $50 for every captured tank.

"I suppose the argument will go on for a month," Woolcock said.

Capt. Jean Faub, Macon, Ga., was called to question the tank commander. Explaining his capture, the North Korean said:

"I couldn't drive the tank and shoot too."

He presented Faub with his collar insignia as a souvenir and said he would have surrendered much sooner if he had known what a friendly reception he would get.

The tanker said his tank was the only one of 16 left in his battalion—the rest had been knocked out by mines or planes.

U. S. Restores Controls on Steel Exports

The Government acted yesterday to prevent foreign buying from cutting into American supplies of iron and steel products important to defense.

The Commerce Department announced that, effective at midnight September 30, export controls will be reimposed on 39 classes of iron and steel mill products declared control-free last March.

The controls prevent shipment of these products, except by license from the Department, to any foreign destination but Canada, which is exempt from all export restrictions.

"With this recontrol action," the Department said, "all important iron and steel commodities will be included on the positive (license-requiring) list."

The order includes these products:

Pig iron, all grades; carbon steel ingots; carbon steel billets, blooms and slabs; steel sheet bars and tinplate bars.

Iron bars; concrete reinforcement bars (deformed and twisted only); hot-rolled steel bars; hot-rolled carbon steel plate; cold-rolled carbon steel plate; skelp, iron and steel; galvanized sheet, culverts, and sections; other galvanized iron sheets; galvanized steel culvert sheet, culverts, sect; other galvanized steel sheets.

Hot-rolled steel sheets, black including enameled, lacquered or painted; cold-rolled sheet, ungalvanized, except tin mill black plate rejects, wasters, waste-wasters, and rejects; iron sheets black; cold-rolled carbon steel strip; hot-rolled carbon steel strip; waste-waste tinplate; structural shapes, plain, unfabricated; structural shapes, fabricated.

Woven wire fencing, wire bale ties, wire nails, other nails and staples, fence posts, iron and steel; tool bit blanks, iron and steel; perforated steel sheets, plain.

Kilgore Hits McCarran Bill Red Register

By the United Press

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) said yesterday the McCarran omnibus Communist control bill would damage the effectiveness of the FBI by forcing it to reveal its undercover agents in the Communist Party.

It is not only impracticable but unconstitutional, he said in a formal statement.

The bill, now up for passage in the Senate, is sponsored by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.). It would force Communists to register with the Justice Department under penalty of fine or jail.

The Senate is scheduled to vote on the substitute and the McCarran bill Tuesday.

approach to the problems which this order imposes upon us. Whatever inconveniences result will, I know, be cheerfully borne by businessmen and citizens because of our common faith in and our will to defend our free society."

Sawyer said the first orders of the new agency "may be expected promptly" and it was reported that two such orders would be issued within the week. These would deal with hoarding and would establish priorities placing military production ahead of that for the civilian economy in the Nation's factories.

Simultaneously with its announcement of the creation of NPA, the Commerce Department issued orders reimposing export controls on 39 classes of iron and steel mill products which had been decontrolled for export last March. The products covered can be exported, except to Canada, after September 30 only under license from the department.

Establishment of the NPA and appointment of Harrison to head it completed one phase of the "austerity" program outlined by Mr. Truman in his Saturday night address from the White House and provided an equivalent of the powerful War Production Board of World War II. Another phase of the control picture was filled in by Mr. Truman himself when he named W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, as "coordinator" to head up the whole program.

Left still to be instituted was the important economic stabilization agency to control prices and wages, which also was authorized under the new law. Although the President said he was not prepared to impose these restrictions at this time, he set up the agency to keep an eye on the situation and determine when and where they might be needed. It cannot begin functioning until Mr. Truman names the price stabilizer and the nine-man board which will serve under him.

It was expected that, following the steel conference today, Harriman would call a series of industry meetings to study the supply situation in each and to take steps toward voluntary control. NPB is expected also to ask other departments of the Government for summaries of their positions with respect to areas of resources and production under their control. Agriculture Department is responsible for food and farm products, for instance, and Interior for petroleum and mineral resources.

Assisting Harrison will be an Advisory Committee on Priorities Administration, consisting of 10 members. It will include members from the Defense, Interior, State, Labor, Agriculture and Treasury Departments; the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade; the Economic Cooperation Administration, Atomic Energy Commission and Home Finance Agency.

Harrison, who will take official leave from his IT&T post while serving here, began his business career as a repairman for the New York Telephone Co. in 1909 and advanced through the engineering department of several telephone companies to his present poition in 1948. He is a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., and served in various production control capacities here from 1940 until commissioned in the Army in 1942. He served in the Service of Supply and was inactivated in 1945 with the rank of major general.

Senate Unit Pigeonholes RFC Nominations

By The Associated Press

The Senate Banking Committtee has quietly pigeonholed for the time being President Truman's nomination of five directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. This apparently delays until later in the year an expected confirmation battle.

Members said Chairman Maybang (D., S. C.) left for the international monetary conference in Paris without setting any hearings on the RFC appointments or assigning them to a subcommittee for study.

Maybank's expected three-week absence likely will hold up action on the five until after Congress takes a fall vacation.

Some other appointments are in the same fix, although Administration leaders may be able to get action soon on the President's nomination of former Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City as Ambassador to Mexico, despite open opposition.

O'Dwyer has been asked to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a closed session Tuesday to talk about his record as mayor and as Brooklyn prosecutor.

There were some reports that Maybank's decision to delay action on the RFC nominees was taken on the advice of White House aides who seemed to think some of the fire might go out of the opposition in time.

When the President shook up the RFC recently by failing to reappoint Chairman Harley Hise and Harvey Gunderson, a Republican, he named Walter L. Dunham of Michigan and William E. Willett of Maryland to new terms in the agency.

The President picked C. Edward Rowe of Massachusetts, Walter E. Cosgriff of Utah and W. Elmer Harber of Oklahoma as new members. In the case of the latter three, interested Senators apparently weren't consulted in advance.

Canada Planning Bigger Korea Force

OTTAWA, Sept. 10 (AP).—Canada may send a force of 15,000 men to fight in Korea, Defense Minister Brooke Claxton has disclosed.

In a speech in Parliament Saturday night Claxton said Canada's commitment in Korea has been widened. Originally the target was for between 4000 and 5000 men.

Already Canada has recruited 8300 men for a Korean brigade. It is expected to sail after Christmas and will have further training in Japan before going into action.

Lane Feasts, Talks In Charles County

Heading toward the climax of his campaign for renomination, Gov. William Preston Lane of Maryland yesterday spent the day feasting, relaxing and talking with the citizens of Charles County.

High point of the tour was a crab feast in a La Plata tobacco warehouse, where the Governor shared the platform with Senator Millard E. Tydings and Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, both of whom are also running for renomination on the Democratic ticket.

Governor Lane told of plans to build a road from Route 301 and Route 210 to put La Plata not more than 35 minutes from the center of Washington.

He said that Charles County enjoyed the lowest real estate tax in the State, $1 per $100 of assessed valuation, because of money returned by the State to the county under the Sherbow Plan.

Tydings also spoke but did not directly indorse Governor Lane whose principal opponent for the nomination is George P. Mahoney of Baltimore. The crab feast was moved indoors from the Charles County Fairgrounds because of rain.

The Governor arrived at Waldorf, proceeded to Benedict where he inspected construction of the new Patuxent River Bridge, and then to Hughesville where he watched a baseball game between amateur teams from Hughesville and Benedict.

Also on the tour were James C. Mitchell and Eugene Lloyd, members of the Democratic State Central Committee from Charles County.

The candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination said, if elected, he also would seek to eliminate the tax from restaurant meals, medicines, drugs, powders, baby oils and home heating fuels.

"In addition," he promised, "I shall recommend to the Legislature that they carry out my pledge to our citizens of a 10 percent reduction in individual income taxes."

His statement today said: "Then when you buy a pack of cigarettes or a milk shake or a bottle of beer, or when you shop in 10-cent stores, you will not be annoyed with having to pay the sales tax pennies."

The present tax rate applies to purchases of at least 15 cents.

Mahoney Would Raise Floor on Sales Tax

BALTIMORE, Sept. 10 (AP).—George P. Mahoney said today he would recommend elimination of the Maryland retail sales tax from all purchases of less than 35 cents.

Arlington County Course in Retail Selling Started

Registration for a series of evening courses on retail merchandising, open to employes of Arlington County stores, will get under way today at Washington-Lee High School.

The classes will meet one night a week, include such subjects as how to arrange stock setting up displays, how to sell, and study of inventory turnover.

Prospective students may register today by telephoning Dr. Russell L. Moncrief, head of the school's distributive education program, at OWens 7600, or by registering at the school at 7:10 o'clock tonight.

O'Conor Backs McCarran Bill to Curb Reds

BALTIMORE, Sept. 10 (AP).—Senator Herbert O'Conor (D., Md.) said today the McCarran bill "would strike at the very core" of Communism in the United States without leading to thought control.

The junior Maryland Senator spoke in a radio address on the measure sponsored by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.)

O'Conor said: "The bill will not do a number of things which Communist and misled people have asserted in an effort to defeat it. Nor will it restrict legitimate activities of bona-fide political parties.

"It will not prohibit activities of cultural or other groups which are engaged in efforts for public betterment, and which do not have allegiance to foreign propaganda agencies and are not organized for the purpose of advancemunists and misled people have nism."

The bill would require registration of organizations supported by the Communist Party.

Among other things, it also would ban the immigration of subversive aliens and provides for the deportation of any already in the United States.

"Forest fires destroy enough trees to build millions of homes. You can help prevent this shameful waste.

Strong "muscles" for a big job...

"Your Unseen Friend" makes them tough

"Get a line in front of it!" the Fire Boss orders.

So Forest Ranger Jack Dunford and his crew dig in... with shovels, rakes, hoes, axes. They battle like bearcats to put a line of good clean earth before the creeping blaze.

But everything's dry as dust. And the fire, fanned by a stiff breeze, whips ahead... fast. Too fast! It devours brush, twigs, dead branches, saplings. Races ravenously towards Old Baldy and the tall timber.

It looks bad. It looks like a runaway—until...

Until the "crawlers" come roaring up... to punch out a blade-swept fire line that protects the tall timber from the on-rushing flames.

They're tougher than blazes, these bulldozers. And one thing that makes them tough is Nickel.

Nickel alloys are used to strengthen their "muscles"...

...to make vital parts such as track pins hard enough yet tough enough so these fast-moving crawler tractors can stand up to rough, rocky, rugged going.

...to make other vital parts such as drive gears strong enough so that these earth-movers can be depended upon to have a "Sunday punch" day after day after day.

These days, you see bulldozers in action everywhere... fighting forest fires, building roads and dams, doing the big jobs fast. Wherever you see one—think of Nickel, "Your Unseen Friend."

Nickel is used to bring one or more special properties—strength, toughness, or hardness, for example—to the critical parts of these dependable "work horses." You seldom see it, of course, because it's generally intermixed with other metals.

That is why Nickel is called "Your Unseen Friend."

Because Nickel touches your life in so many different ways, you may well want to know more about it—more about the beginnings of this friendly metal, its present use, its future promise. Write for "The Romance of Nickel." It's good reading, it's short, it's free. Write Dept. 324z, The International Nickel Company, Inc., New York 5, N. Y.

Laudable Veto

President Truman had only Hobson's choice in dealing with the naturalization bill. Although he was eager to sign the original bill intended to remove racial barriers to the naturalization of aliens, he vetoed the measure sent to him by Congress because of its fuzzy and unworkable provisions aimed at prospective citizens suspected of being subversive. In our opinion, he made the right decision. Congress can repass the original bill and thus lift the ban now preventing about 86,000 Japanese and 3000 Koreans in the States and Hawaii from becoming citizens. The veto message specifically urges such action. Certainly that would be preferable to cluttering the law with the undigested amendment written into the bill by a Senate-House conference committee of which Senator McCarran appears to have been the guiding spirit.

The controversial section would bar from citizenship anyone who in the previous 10 years had belonged to any Communist, totalitarian or other subversive organization or had advocated communism or any other form of totalitarianism. Not only that—persons committing such acts within five years after being naturalized could be deprived of their citizenship. "It would be impossible to administer this act," the President wrote in his veto message, "without creating a twilight species of second-class citizens—persons who could be deprived of citizenship on technical grounds, through their ignorance or lack of judgment."

The question is not, of course, whether Communists and other subversives working to destroy the American system should be admitted to citizenship. As the President has pointed out, the country already has "strong laws protecting us against the naturalization of subversive persons." What the present measure would do is to so broaden and confuse the definition of subversion in connection with grants of citizenship as to endanger the civil rights of many innocent persons and perhaps weaken enforcement of the naturalization laws. If there is any weakness in those laws, let it be corrected by a separate bill going to the heart of the problem. But surely Congress ought not to insist on enactment of this crude "rider" attached to the naturalization bill without careful study or awareness of its probable consequences.

Credit Buying Curb

The total volume of outstanding consumer credit topped 20 billion dollars last July—an increase of more than four billion dollars during the year. This credit-created addition to purchasing power has stimulated demands for all sorts of consumer goods, particularly goods bought on the installment plan, and has intensified the inflationary pressures that have resulted in rising prices. Since the expiration of Federal Reserve Board control over installment credit in mid-1949, the percentage of down payments has dropped in many cases, and repayment periods have lengthened. The board's new Regulation W is designed to arrest this trend toward easy credit terms by requiring purchasers of automobiles, household equipment, radios, television sets, and other durable goods to make minimum down payments of specified amounts and by setting maximum periods for completion of payments.

The first Regulation W was put into effect by executive order in 1941 while the United States was still in the defense stage of war preparations. Subsequently consumer credits declined rapidly, in part because of credit restrictions, but chiefly because of a scarcity of goods customarily bought on the installment plan. Since large numbers of consumers were able to meet the restrictions imposed by the Reserve Board at that time, consumer credit would doubtless have remained at high levels throughout the war years, if goods had been available. However, restrictions on consumer credit slow the pace of buying, especially by lower-income groups. The new Regulation W as well as its predecessor is therefore, as the Federal Reserve Board states, a "useful supplementary weapon" for combating inflation rather than a major control instrumentality.

To the extent that the new regulation curtails buying of durable goods, it will reduce the drain on steel, aluminum, copper and other scarce materials used in the manufacture of such articles. Obviously installment credit control cannot be relied on to reduce civilian consumption of scarce materials sufficiently to meet the needs of the defense program. That calls for an allocations system compelling industries to cut down their output of civilian goods that absorb materials needed for weapons. The regulation will, however, help to divert consumer buying to categories of goods that do not compete with military demands and possibly encourage people to save money instead of succumbing to the lure of ultra-liberal installment credit offers.

Girding For Defense

In his Saturday night broadcast the President warned the country that the defense program cannot be achieved on the basis of business as usual. Harder work and longer hours will be required to turn out the necessary guns, planes and tanks. Taxes will have to be increased much more than five billion dollars—the amount carried in the interim tax bill—to pay for increased military outlays, and steps must be taken to prevent inflation. To attain these objectives everyone will be called on to make sacrifices and accept some reductions in living standards. Although emphasizing his belief that the American people are willing to make the necessary sacrifices required of them, Mr. Truman admits that controls will be necessary in some cases and promises to use them unhesitatingly whenever voluntary action proves ineffective.

The latter part of the address, in which the President outlined the steps being taken to carry out the control program, is a reply to questions that he had previously refused to answer. The answers remove any doubts of his intention to administer controls vigorously and promptly. In two executive orders he has provided for the institution of wage and price controls if necessary. The first order requires businessmen to keep records of their prices and costs during the base period, May 24-June 24, so that information will be available to set price ceilings at fair levels. The second order designates the departments selected to handle allocations and finance the expansion of productive capacity and sets up a new independent agency to establish wage and price ceilings when and if necessary. The administrator will be commissioned to plan long and short-range price and wage stabilization policies and set up an organization for administering them. A director of Price Stabilization and a Wage Stabilization Board on which industry, labor and the public is represented will be under his direction.

The President reiterates his desire to encourage voluntary efforts to hold down inflation as an alternative to compulsion, and the head of the new Economic Stabilization Agency is expected to guide and encourage those efforts. However, the President promises to use his powers of control whenever needed, although he doubts whether the Defense Production Act will permit him to make effective use of selective controls, as it requires wage stabilization in any industry whose products are put under price ceilings. In our opinion, his misgivings are well founded since workers would object strenuously to selective controls over wages. By thus centralizing responsibility for policy decisions and administrative supervision in the head of the new agency a coordinated wage-price control program could be developed that would prevent the various subordinate agencies administering controls from working at cross purposes.

In addition to providing for a unified system of over-all controls for possible future use, Mr. Truman has also taken steps to coordinate the activities of the departments and agencies selected to handle priorities and allocations. It had been rumored that W. Stuart Symington, head of the National Security Resources Board, would be selected as coordinator of this limited program. In a Sunday editorial published before the announcement of Mr. Symington's appointment, The Washington Post expressed hope that the President would make his decision known at once. By doing so, he has set at rest fears that the allocations program would get off to a bad start, without an umpire to settle disputes among various claimant agencies.

By relying on existing agencies to administer his control program and selecting as coordinator the head of the Government's mobilization planning agency vigorous and prompt exercise of delegated authority is made possible. This is a most important consideration since quick action is essential to divert scarce materials needed for defense purposes from use by industries producing goods for civilian consumption. By advance planning, moreover, the new Economic Stabilization Agency can also be expanded with a minimum loss of time into a full-fledged price and wage stabilization organization. Meantime it serves a highly useful purpose as an advisory agency to the Government, industry and labor. If it succeeds in encouraging and promoting voluntary cooperation with the Government, it may never need to impose the over-all controls that the President regards as a last and unwelcome resort.

Campaign Of Truth

Enthusiasm has a way of wearing off quickly, particularly in the halls of Congress. There was great support, for instance, for the post-Korean plea that a great campaign of truth should be launched. This, however, required supplemental appropriations, and the House committee balked particularly at two items which, it seemed to us, are vital to a program of enlightenment, viz, libraries and exchanges of persons.

In the former item the plan was to supply books about America in the educational centers abroad maintained by the United States Information Services. These are in great demand in such countries as India, where a thirst for knowledge about America is apparent to every American traveler. But books are not the limit of the requirements. English is taught at some of the centers, and this part of the program needs to be expanded. Foreign publishers need to be subsidized to print translation of books giving the story of America. Binational societies as, say, the American Iranian Society, do a great deal of gratuitous propaganda for America, and some of their budgets stand in need of assistance.

In a similar category of imperatives is the encouragement of influential persons to come to America and see for themselves. America speaks for itself, and the welcome that has already been given to editors and teachers and other leaders to visit our shores has already yielded dividends. The visitors know they would get no such freedom of travel and inquiry in Russia. To step up these activities in critical areas is to do a service to our cause of geometrical value. Yet the House committee cut the libraries program from six million dollars to two million dollars and the exchange of persons from 12 million dollars to three million dollars. Perhaps the Senate will be more hospitable, for 28 Senators headed by Senator Flanders recently called for "a total engagement of our psychological and spiritual forces" in the campaign of truth.

New Purge In Titoland

A new purge of some proportions has been taking place in Yugoslavia, leaving us with the problem of trying to guess what it all betokens in relation to the present configuration of world politics. Among the victims are three prominent members of the Yugoslav Communist Party. One of them is Dushan Brkitch, a former Partisan leader, a member of the Central Committee, and vice premier of the Croatian Republic; another is Radek Zigitch, head of the important processing industries trust; the third is a member of Tito's government, Stanko Opacitch, Minister of Forestry and a former major general of the Yugoslav army. Meanwhile, a kind of housecleaning has been taking place in the lower strata of the Yugoslav bureaucracy under the direction of the dreaded Comrade Rankovitch.

The official explanation of the purge is that, despite the big purges of 1948 and 1949, the Cominform Communists managed to infiltrate the Titoist bureaucracy and to sabotage some of its activities. Brkitch, Opacitch and Zigitch are under suspicion of having been part of this conspiracy. This explanation may be correct, but since Yugoslavia is still a police state it cannot be taken at face value. Notwithstanding the vigilance of Comrade Rankovitch, there are said to be a good many covert Stalinists within the Yugoslav party. There are probably a good many more Communists who, though they were willing to follow Tito into schism with Moscow, might rebel at any general repudiation of Communist doctrine and goals. And this raises the question whether the new purge signifies any radical alteration in Tito's international and internal policies.

From all available evidence—which is little enough—Tito's internal situation is at this point none too happy. The five-year plan for Yugoslav industry, which was based on the expectation of large supplies of raw materials from Russia, has, of course, been a failure. The agriculture of the country has been stricken by a prolonged and calamitous drought, and apparently there is danger of famine unless foodstuffs can be obtained from the United States. It would not be surprising if, in view of these conditions, the concealed Stalinists within the Yugoslav party had been attempting a little surreptitious agitation.

Meanwhile, the advent of the Korean war has obliged Tito to modify his former ideological position. He can no longer represent himself in his propaganda as the champion of a purer form of communism than Moscow's, as the implacable enemy of the international bourgeoisie, and at the same time beg for assistance from the democracies. In short, he is being obliged by both external and internal pressures to commit himself irrevocably in the approaching conflict. He has, indeed, no real choice; for from Stalin he can expect nothing but vengeance.

Taxes In Maryland

The Democratic gubernatorial primary campaign in Maryland, which will be adjudicated by the voters of that State on September 18, is being attended by more than the usual quantum of epithet-throwing. The two principal rivals for the nomination are Governor Lane of Hagerstown and George P. Mahoney of Baltimore. The Governor started the fight more or less decorously, but stung by Mahoney's name-calling, he is now giving abuse for abuse. "Bamboozler" and "fishwife" are two of the milder descriptions passed between camps—on an almost daily basis as the primary election draws near.

In the heat of battle, however, the candidates are at loggerheads over an issue of considerable importance to the State of Maryland—an issue which is deserving of a more careful presentation than either candidate is giving it. The issue is that of Maryland's tax system. Mr. Mahoney has promised, if elected, to abolish either the income tax or the State's sales tax, while Governor Lane has now moved into the position of promising an "ultimate" complete abolition of the tax on real property. The incumbent, however, still has the advantage because of the pull of the State organization, though the contest looks as if it may be very close.

Toward Democracy

Your newspaper is deserving of thanks in its maintenance of a degree of balance in these times by its opposition to the content and principles of the McCarran bill and similar silence-the-critics-and-skeptics legislation, but you seem unwilling to analyze the deeper implications of the legislation, thus not aiding sufficiently in the task of mitigating the hysteria.

The definite trend in the world today is away from democracy! Today we have a changed world: atom bombs, the scientific wherewithal to do away with mass hunger the world over, vastly more enlightened publics. Democracy is at a crisis. How to adjust itself to these new conditions? It would seem that in light of these conditions people get more freedom or less of it, more material provisions or less of them (putting their material wealth instead into war production), they become more educated or they oppose continued, more perfect delineation of truth.

The McCarran bill, and the Woods bill passed in the House by an overwhelming majority, reveals the fear felt by so many men in our times when having to cope with these new conditions. Rather than countering false analyses with sounder, more democratic ones, they choose to blot out that part of America which is attempting to cope with these new conditions.

There is a tiny segment, even of skeptical America, that would use this critical era to further their own selfish ends. These persons deserve to be rooted out. The rest, the overwhelming rank and file, must be allowed to work out their political destiny, if America is not to become an arsenal of darkness. Too much democracy has never in history proved to be dangerous or unrewarding. America is strongly endowed in that there exists a host of opposing schools of opinion striving for popular sanction.

There is a danger that men who will not recognize the critical nature of our times, ideologically as well as militarily, will, as the easy way out, bring us closer and closer to war, so as to justify and make complete the stamping out of new thinking attempting to cope with the more basic problems of our age.

Meditation

In this time of complexity and perplexity, when human counsel is so often divided and confused, there is not one among us who won't profit by holding back his decisions on important actions long enough to listen to the promptings of his spirit. That quiet urge of the divine within us generally proves the wisest and best course of action for ourselves and our world.

It is only right to give important matters all the thought they deserve; yet, at the end of our thinking, there is need to wait a bit, as a judge waits for the jury to announce its decision.

In practicing divine guidance, we are practicing what we are most short of today—self-discipline. We can never know how many of our most disastrous decisions have been due to lack of patience—lack of that little extra self-control which makes the difference between wisdom and foolishness.

Even our prayers should consist more of listening than of speaking. All of us need to become better listeners, most of all when we commune with Him from whom all wisdom comes.

"Spanish Chances"

Joseph L. Puente in his letter of September 6, commenting on your editorial on Spain and the loan authorization makes some points, but does not go far enough.

The basic issue in this matter is: Shall the United States help nations all over the world build up strength against communism? In the face of this issue your editorial is mere rationalizing of a now obsolete State Department policy against "Fascists." You state, in effect, that the loan to Spain, despite congressional authorization, should be impounded because:

1. Spain is non-Communist anyhow;

2. Spain's military value is exaggerated.

Your first point misses the issue. Yugoslavia is Communist, yet it is being given aid because it is anti-Russia, or at least we so hope. Spain is not Communist, but because it is also strongly anti-Communist does not mean we should ignore the importance of helping its weak economy in order to assure its continuing anti-communism. By your argument we should be denying aid to England, or to the Benelux countries, or to other nations "non-Communist anyhow." A prosperous Europe means an anti-Communist Europe, and that includes Spain as well as other western European countries.

Your passing off of Spain's military value as exaggerated is too glib and tabloidal. We should let the military decide the importance of Spain militarily, especially in the event of war in the Balkans and Mediterranean. The Pyrenees may be much more important than you believe, in the event of Russian land warfare to the West and possible loss of any European base for us from which to launch a land and air counterattack.

We are involved in a worldwide war against communism. That war has already given us some strange allies, Yugoslavia, for example. Spain as an ally is no more paradoxical, and, in practical value, militarily she may turn out to be more valuable as an ally.

Hager Report

Hooray for Dr. Walter E. Hager for his proposal to merge the city's white and Negro teachers' colleges! The manner in which the officials on the board of directors of Wilson have reacted to his proposal is typical of narrow-thinking diehards in the Nation's Capital.

To bicker over such trivialities as whether Dr. Hager's idea is "radical" and whether he is being "very insubordinate in advancing the idea publicly until the board had an opportunity to consider it," is striking another blow in favor of racial segregation in the District's schools. One can imagine what the board would have done to the proposal.

Since school is one of the first and most important places in which the child makes real contacts outside of the protection of his home surely there is no better place to learn the equality of human beings. The college level is a little late in a person's life but if even that were liberal perhaps the other schools would follow its example.

Undermining Communism

Turning over backwards far enough can easily end in a somersault. This seems to be the case with a lot of people who make a show of fighting communism. Those whom the Communists fear the most are not the ones who shout the loudest but are so frightened of communism that they end up in the same kind of police-state totalitarianism. What communism really fears is the man who knows and understands what freedom really stands for, who maintains his steady belief, and who cannot be "scared" into giving up his liberties to fight communism. He may, after careful deliberation, curtail certain rights temporarily, but he will not rush into such actions in thoughtless panic. Communism's greatest foe is the "quiet man" who realizes the dangers of both kinds of totalitarianism and refuses to be pushed either way. The more steadfast we remain in upholding the basic rights and freedoms that means "America", the better we can show the world that these rights and freedoms are so "right" and so "free" that no totalitarian ideology—Communist or Fascist—can undermine them.

I would like to compare it to that toy figure with lead in the bottom. Communism may sock it from the left, Fascism may give it a blow from the right—but our American ideology will always regain its balance and stand erect if it is weighted with the basic rights and freedoms as guaranteed in our Constitution. The greatest step in evolution was when men stood erect for the first time, and looked straight ahead with single vision. May we stay that way and face our foes—for if we turn over too far backward, we may find ourselves back again on all fours.

"Why We Fight"

In The Washington Post of August 31, was a letter entitled "Why We Fight" and signed "Anxious." I feel that this is a question which many are asking and more are thinking about, and wish to give my thoughts as to some of the answers.

The writer clearly states some of our mistakes nationally. They are many. It is not enough to see the mistakes either nationally or personally and criticize. We must have a positive answer which comes from our personal experience for "as we are so is our Nation."

This answer is clearly stated in a small book, I Am Not Alone, that I want to recommend to the writer, and to all of the "anxious" who really want the answer to this situation.

This little book by Pfc. John Hogan of New York is made up of his letters to his family, and because they have a lesson for all of America, they let these very intimate letters be published. John Hogan was killed in action on Okinawa in May, 1945. He gives in his letters an amazing philosophy. If followed both personally and nationally, I firmly believe this present conflict would have been prevented. This book may be obtained from Mackinac Press, 833 South Flower st., Los Angeles, Calif.

It is not enough to be anxious. We must have an answer, and I believe it to be found here, as it comes from the heart of one of our own soldiers to the heart of his family, and through them to us.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Farewell To Battalion

ON LEAVING KOREA for a few days, this reporter proposes to write a sort of bread and butter letter to the members of the First Battalion of the Twenty-seventh Infantry Regiment, who were his hosts for some time when they were brilliantly winding up a very tough job.

What makes a good battalion, is the letter's theme. Wherein lies the secret of such a fighting team? "In the men themselves," is the obvious first part of the answer.

In the First Battalion, there is, for example, Capt. Logan E. Weston, now wounded, but lately commander of Able Company. When Able Company was attacked by a heavy force of night-infiltrating enemy infantry, Weston rallied his men. He rushed two enemy machine guns single-handed and destroyed them with grenades. Although sorely hit, he continued to command the fight until ammunition ran short. Under heavy fire, he sought the ammunition bearer. Wounded again, he plunged back into the struggle. And only when the enemy fled at last, did he collapse from loss of blood.

OR THERE IS Corpl. Arthur Prater, who got the Silver Star in the battalion's first action for carrying rations and water to a company that was cut off. Prater has bad feet, but prefers staying with the outfit to accepting a medical discharge. Or there is Acting Supply Sergt. Clurion Grigsby, who drove into the middle of an enemy armored column when he was bringing equipment from the rear. Grigsby seized a bazooka, leaped from his weapons carrier and got a North Korean tank at 10 yards range.

Or there are many scores of others, in this small outfit of a few hundred, who are not so very different from those who have been named. At first, these men of the First Battalion impress you as individuals, some clever, some less clever, some mature, some incredibly young, but almost all lean, hard, good tempered and businesslike about their task of fighting. Then, as you listen to the talk among them, you are struck by the way that shared experience knits them together.

Of experience also, the First Battalion has had a generous helping in only six short weeks. On that first day on the Waegwan front, when Prater got his decoration, the battalion was attacked by no less than 2000 enemy infantry, moving forward in columns behind six tanks. Baker company's position was utterly overrun. The lead tank was halted almost at the entrance of the battalion command post.

But the battalion stood firm and shot it out until the North Koreans ran; then rapidly regrouped to meet a night attack on its flank and covered the rice paddies with North Korean dead. That, they tell you, was how the outfit was made.

Or there was the long reconnaissance in force, when the whole battalion drove into enemy territory for 27 miles beyond Chindong, was cut off for 24 hours, and briskly fought its way back. That time, two tank drivers were killed. Volunteer replacements were called for. Two men who had once driven bulldozers stepped forward. And the tanks rumbled back into our lines with a cook and a medic at their wheels.

Or there were a score of other skirmishes and actions each variously memorable, all matters of pride. Hearing these discussed, watching still another fight that would also be recalled, one gradually realized that there was yet one more ingredient in this puzzling entity, the First Battalion. And this ingredient of course was good leadership.

From the wiry, unpretentious little battalion commander, Lieut. Col. G. J. Check, down to Baker Company's massive, fatherly 1st Sergt. George S. Hearn, the First Battalion's leaders sedulously avoid any appearance of panache, preferring a good salty joke to any military heroics. But by the hard, poorly rewarded, unremitting work of these men, the battalion's companies organize each new position as though by instinct; the rifle platoons flinch from no shadows but are always ready, day and night; the tank crews and the mortars cooly aim their fire, whether the battle goes well or ill; the bazooka teams, lonely in their forward foxholes, keep vigil until the time comes for their task.

SUCH THEN is the First Battalion, no assemblage of saints and when on occupation duty rather notoriously the opposite, but a fighting team that will go forward without counting costs; will hold an exposed position against heavy odds; will uncomplainingly endure great hardships; will see its own men fall and quietly close the ranks. Many have fallen. When this reporter watched the blanket covered litters being brought down the mountainside, he found himself recalling Simonides' great epitaph on the Spartans at Thermopylae. It was inscribed on the monument erected in the pass by the Lacedaemonian state. The dead speak:

"Go stranger and in Lacedaemon tell
"That here, obedient to the laws, we fell."

But these men were not Spartans, drilled, beautiful and unthinking. They were Americans, fighting not for iron laws, but for a good life and a good society. And if perchance the good life and the good society survive in this now-darkening world, it will be to such men as these, simple, perhaps, inarticulate perhaps, but bold, tough, ingenious and free, that the great debt will be owed.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Time Out

HARRY S. TRUMAN'S spat with the Marine Corps did at least give us all something to talk about which took our minds off the military predicament in Korea and elsewhere. As in a good murder story no one was hurt and it all had a happy ending. The Marines, as always, are first in war, and in the hearts of their countrymen they are second to none. Mr. Truman, as usual, has made it downright impossible for anyone to keep on being angry with him. In this affair, when he read the words which previous to that he had only spoken to his stenographer, it was apparently the first time he knew he had ever thought that the Marines and Stalin had anything in common.

Lippmann

This is not an unusual experience. At some time or other practically everyone, except the most boringly cautious and calculating, has been astonished to hear himself announcing opinions he never knew he had. It is less usual for a President to be caught uttering unpremeditated words. All Presidents utter them, to be sure, but it is one of the essential prerogatives of the office, firmly established by the first Roosevelt, that anyone who publishes an unpremeditated remark of the President's is ipso facto a liar. .

But the prerogative does not work, of course, when the President writes letters and there is documentary proof therefor which cannot be done away with. Since any letter might be and probably will be published, presidential letters are written for publication now or in the history books. And so they are supposed to be edited, censored, and vetted by a staff of specialists on the passions and emotions of the human heart, on the prejudices and yearnings of the human mind, and on the devious devices of the opposition party.

OUR ESCAPE from anxiety over the military predicament has been, however, brief. The news from all sides makes it ever harder to deny that the deficit is growing wider, not narrower, between our military commitments on the one hand, our military effort and our diplomatic posture on the other. The confident optimism which has been emanating from Tokyo and Washington may have been justified by military developments which are still secret. But too many times when it was said that the front had been stabilized, there has been another retreat; too many times after it was said that the offensive power of the North Koreans was broken, there has been another North Korean offensive.

The effect of this false optimism has been to arouse doubt, not confidence and resolution. One has begun to wonder whether the global position has really been faced up to. The predicament of our forces in Korea would appear to be that, outnumbered as they have been from the beginning, the reinforcements which are reaching them are quite insufficient to give them even equality for a defensive campaign, much less the great superiority required to recover the ground they have had to yield.

BUT THAT is not the whole of the predicament, nor the part of it which we need most anxiously and deeply to take to heart. The grimmest facts lie in the strategic reserves, actual and potential. Behind the North Koreans, across the Yalu River, there are under arms—as compared with all the infantry of the Atlantic community—inexhaustible reserves.

It is idle to imagine that the enormous numerical preponderance of the Sino-Soviet alliance in Asia can be overcome by military means alone. The predicament of the western nations in Asia cannot be resolved unless their military action, which must necessarily be on a fairly small scale, is enveloped and reinforced by a diplomatic action conceived and executed on the largest scale. Let us hope that when the nations come to the General Assembly they will be inspired and emboldened.

one party very strong in terms of armament and the other party very weak. We have got to talk as equals. And once we reach that point I believe that with that equality of position and with the effects of time we can work out in a peaceful way stability in the world and peace between East and West."

Asked if we have "any real assurance" western European peoples will fight against Russia if it comes to that, Acheson replied:

"I think we have every assurance that they will fight if they have something to fight with. You obviously can't fight a tank with your bare hands. We must go forward as we have been going forward with the North Atlantic Treaty—we have laid the foundation of organization now—what remains to be done is to provide the troops, the organized, balanced, collective forces, and the equipment to set up an organization of armed forces in the West made up of our own forces, our Canadian Allies and our European friends which will be powerful enough to deter any aggression."'

It would be "sheer madness," the Secretary said in response to another question, for the Chinese Communists to become involved in the Korean war in support of the North Korean Communists because China is facing "a great cloud from the north, Russian penetration," the aim of which is to "absorb" northern areas of China under Soviet domination.

"I give the people of Peiping credit for being intelligent enough," he said, "to see what is happening to them. Why they should want to further their own dismemberment and destruction by getting at cross purposes with all the free nations of the world who are inherently their friends and have always been friends of the Chinese as against this imperialism coming down from the Soviet Union I cannot see."

As for "writing off" Asia, the Secretary said, "we do not think that any part of Asia is lost to the free world. We still believe that the Chinese are going to be Chinese before they are going to be Communists. We believe that the people of Indo-China will see this menace (of Soviet Russia) which is coming toward them. We think that the people of the Philippines, and the people of Indonesia, and the people of Japan, and the people of Korea see that menace. We are helping all those countries."

O'Mahoney Refuses to Take Chapman Quiz 'Underground'

Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) of the Senate Interior Committee, yesterday bluntly rejected a proposal by Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.) that further loyalty hearings on Secretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman be conducted in secret.

He also was cool to Schoeppel's demand for a broadened inquiry into Chapman's past asociations but urged that "anybody" with any accusations against the Secretary "come forward under oath and testify."

Schoeppel touched off the investigation of Chapman with a Senate speech September 5 in which he said the Secretary had formerly been linked with Red front groups and had failed to take a Government loyalty oath.

Chapman made a sweeping denial and produced evidence he had taken the loyalty oath a number of times.

Schoeppel now claims that all "documentary evidence" in the files of the House Committee on Un-American Activities links Chapman with the American League for Peace and Freedom or its predecessor, the American League Against War and Fascism. Both are listed as subversive by the United States Attorney General.

He asked O'Mahoney to subpena officials of the House group. He also proposed that further hearings be conducted in secret until after the November election to "keep politics out of the picture."

"My committee will not go underground," O'Mahoney told the United Press yesterday.

"Whatever is done will be done above board, right on the table where everybody can see."

Officials of the House committee were unavailable for comment, but Chapman said he knew of no information they could have linking him with either of the "American League" groups.

Wage Freeze Now Would Be Unfair, AFL Chief Says

American Federation of Labor President William Green said yesterday any attempt to freeze wages would be unjust to the working man.

"Wages must be permitted to rise through the process of collective bargaining and otherwise to establish a proper basis of parity (with prices) before wage controls are considered," he asserted.

He made the statement in an open letter to Earl Bunting, managing director of the National Association of Manufacturers. It was in reply to a letter from Bunting to Green on August 23, in which the NAM spokesman challenged AFL contentions that price increases have far outrun wages since the outbreak of the Korean war.

Green said the figures cited by Bunting tell only part of the story, but even then make clear that "inflationary" increases have wiped out most of the wage gains made by labor since 1944.

Murky, Gulf Coast weather was due in the District today. The forecast called for a high about 82 degrees after an overnight low of about 67.

Such weather will continue, the forecaster said, for several days. Then a mass of cooler, drier air will come in from the Plains States.

Yesterday's sample of Gulf weather resulted in a high of 87 degrees at 3:10 p. m., making it the third warmest day of the month. The low—69 degrees—came at 6:05 a. m.

Humidity ranged from an uncomfortable 61 percent at 3 p. m. to a miserable 98 percent at 8 a. m.

Even without the evening's deluge, the District was ¼ inch above the normal rainfall for the first 10 days of September.

Raging Torrents Kill 2, Leave Hundreds Homeless In Virginia

By The Associated Press

Heavy rains turned small rivers and streams raging torrents in western and central Virginia Sunday, killing at least two persons and leaving hundreds of families homeless.

The brunt of the flash floods was borne by Rockbridge County, in west central Virginia, where two persons were drowned, hundreds of homes were washed away and property damage ran into several hundred thousand dollars.

Major highways throughout the central Shenandoah Valley were inundated for several hours, but most of them were cleared late yesterday for at least one-way traffic.

U. S. 1, principal north-south highway from Maine to Florida, was under water at three points near north-central Fredericksburg, not far from Washington. State police halted all except emergency truck traffic north of Richmond over the highway.

A washout halted all rail traffic over the tracks of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railway between Richmond and Fredericksburg. R.F.&P. trains were being re-routed.

Flooded highway conditions were reported throughout the southern end of the Shenandoah Valley from Lexington to Roanoke and from west of Lexington eastward to Buena Vista.

High water also was reported in the Harrisonburg area—scene of last year's disastrous floods—and extending into the northern Virginia area from Culpeper eastward to Fredericksburg.

Both drowning victims were from Rockbridge County—Mrs. Lily Myers of Kerrs Creek and Henry Smith of the Buffalo Creek section.

U. S. Agency's 'Brain' Beats EvenHarvard's

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

We're no Harvard man, so it was with some satisfaction this week that we came across a gadget that's "hundreds of times faster" than that mechanical brain they've got up at Cambridge.

It is the National Bureau of Standard's Eastern Automatic Computer and it has aroused bug-eyed interest in demonstrations in connection with the Conference on Automatic Computation at the Shoreham.

The SEAC is an electronic device and the fastest in the world. It makes that old mechanical brain look like the Neanderthal man.

It is wonderful and it is a bit errifying, the electronic brain. It does everything but breathe. You may give it such an order as:

"Take the Number in Pigeonhole A, add it to the Number in Pigeonhole B, put the answer in Pigeonhole C then go to Pigeonhole D for your next order . . . "

And it will execute it, like a mammoth and faithful slave.

The time may come in the distant future, believes SEAC's main developer, 33-year-old Dr. Ralph J. Slutz, when SEAC's successors are completely operating factories, from putting the raw material in at one end to bringing it out the other in the form of automobiles or what have you.

It has been figured out that the electronic computer can do in one minute what it takes a girl operating a desk calculator a month to do.

The Brain knows 512 "words," a word here being a code. The phrase above, beginning "Take the Number," is one word, for example.

A number was fed into the machine: 166, 666,666,657.

The Brain answered: "This number is not divisible by any number other than 1 and itself.

A man working eight hours a day with a desk calculator would have required three months to give this answer.

The Brain gave it after 40 minutes.

The electronic computer was sponsored by the Air Force, which will use it to plan efficient operating and mobilization schedules.

Tree Census In District Shows Gain

The District's "official" tree population is increasing.

John W. Batson, superintendent of trees and parking, told the District Commissioners that his department planted 763 more trees during the 1950 fiscal year than were killed or removed.

The department has jurisdiction over Washington street trees and those standing on public space other than Federal parks and reservations.

Batson said most of the trees destroyed during 1950 were killed either by gas, disease, vandalism or storms.

He reported that 22,000 elm trees were sprayed twice during the year to combat Dutch elm disease, and 3000 oaks were treated with a dormant spray to prevent scale. In fighting the Dutch elm disease, trees were examined periodically and samples taken for laboratory inspection when trees showed indications of being infected. The dead or dying elms were removed, Batson said.

Batson said his department spent $14,345 during the fiscal year to wipe out weeds and poison ivy on park land and city roadways.

Report Made On Christianity In India

A unique experiment in cooperation between churches to win India for Christ is working "amazingly well," according to one of its founding fathers.

This is the opinion of the Most Rev. Michael Hollis, Bishop in Madras, and moderator of the Church of South India, a union of Anglican Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches.

"In India, we faced the titanic task of winning one fifth of the human race to Christianity," Bishop Hollis said.

"Yet, we found ourselves rendered weak and relatively impotent by our unhappy divisions—divisions for which we weren't responsible.

"How could churches unreconciled to each other show Christ reconciled to the people?" he asked.

South India Church Formed

The result was the forming of the Church of South India in 1947.

"We saw the disunion of Christians in South India—where Christians are a tiny minority in the midst of an immense Hindu population—a challenge," Bishop Hollis said.

"It was something realized in 1919 when India's Christian leaders first met to consider the problem. Yet it took 28 years before concrete steps were taken.

The two main difficulties at first, Bishop Hollis said, were in reconciling the creeds and the problems of ministry.

"In every case, there was compromise. But we felt that the things that united us were more important than the things that separated us. And some things that seemed to be a sacrifice to others, later turned out to be immense enrichment.

No Essentials Lost

"None of the churches would say it had lost anything essential in the union."

Bishop Hollis is in the United States for a two months stay, during which time he will meet with church leaders and mission officials. Yesterday he addressed the 11 a. m. service at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw., and the 4 p. m. Evensong service at the Washington Cathedral, Massachusetts and Wisconsin aves. nw.

Bill Would Pay $10,000 to Miss Kilmer

Legislation to pay $10,000 in compensation to Dorothy Kilmer has been introduced by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.).

Dropped in the Senate hopper last Thursday, the bill would authorize payment to Miss Kilmer because of "injuries received on July 29, 1948, when she was struck by a bullet negligently discharged from the revolver of a District of Columbia policeman, as a result of which she will be paralyzed for life."

The policeman was Pvt. Wayne W. Edmondson, a rookie who has since been dropped from the force and found guilty of negligence in a trial before Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

The accidentally discharged bullet lodged near Miss Kilmer's spine, and almost cost her life.

District Commissioners, authorized to pay as much as $5000 on damage claims against the District without congressional approval, voted to reject Miss Kilmer's plea for compensation. They based their action on a recommendation by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, and announced that the payment of compensation "might set a dangerous precedent."

Voluntary contributions from thousands of area residents, helped by a campaign in Bill Gold's District Line column in The Washington Post, raised a rehabilitation fund of more than $6000 for Miss Kilmer.

Elder Robbins

He had been pastor of the church, Lincoln and 9th sts. S. Arlington, for the past three years, during which the new $65,000 church building was completed.

A graduate of Washington Missionary College, Elder Robbins also served as a ministerial intern several years and as a missionary in China for six years.

Gay Nineties Trolley Rolls Again

TRANSIT PROGRESS DAY—This vintage trolley and the trailer car it pulls were dusted off yesterday by the Capital Transit Co. for a tour through Washington as part of the celebration of "Transit Progress Day." The trolley, which began service in the Gay Nineties, carried about 30 members of the "Tractioneers," a club of devoted streetcar fans, dressed in costumes of that period. Motorman John Souder is at the controls, and club member Robert A. Truax, is a Keystone Cop

'Tractioneers' Revisit Days Of Trolleys' 'Gay Nineties'

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

"No wonder things went to pot in the 90s," said the gent in the conservative green, orange, brown-checked suit and bowler hat.

He was riding a reincarnation of the original "Toonerville Trolley" as it lurched, groaned, and clattered west on Pennsylvania ave. nw.

The time was yesterday, not 1895. The stubby streetcar—a four-wheeled, square-cut affair constructed in 1898—was on a rolling tour of town under the guidance of the Capital Transit Co.

It, and the trailer car coupled behind, were loaded with more than 30 members and friends of the "Tractioneers," a hobby group which looks on an antique streetcar with something akin to a "sweet-16" love affair.

As the streetcar rolled up Pennsylvania ave. past the White House people stopped in their tracks, did a double-take, and then showed one of three reactions:

(1) Laughed, (2) dropped their jaws or (3) pulled out cameras and began snapping frantically at the 1890s mirage.

Under the command of motorman John Souder, 1727 3d st. ne.—a Capital Transit employe for 39 years—the cars went on a four-hour rolling binge, stopping at such places as Rosslyn, the Bureau of Engraving, Lincoln Park, and Mount Pleasant.

Air Force Capt. G. F. Cunningham, a club member along for the ride, explained that the trailer car, built in 1892, was one of 32 cable cars bought for use on Pennsylvania ave. when the horsecar went out.

He pointed to a sign inside the car: "Hold on tight going around curves." The car had plush seats and no air brakes. When Motorman Souder wanted to stop, he cranked a hand brake.

The Tractioneers, who collect pictures, pieces, and equipment from old urban electric streetcas, are headed by Leroy King of 3114 N st. nw.

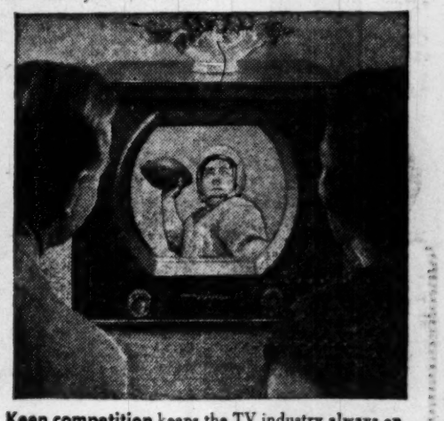
THE TRUTH ABOUT YOUR EYES AND TELEVISION

Motorola, leader in television, brings you good news from experts on your eyesight and TV!

Where should I sit? Don't be misled by the mistaken notion that you should sit a foot away from the receiver for each inch of the screen's width. For instance, 19 feet away from a 19 inch screen. That's "silly" says the president of the New York Optometric Association. He recommends a viewing distance of from 6 to 10 feet for even the larger sized television screens. In other words—sit where you see best!

Two "don'ts." DON'T watch TV in total darkness. Soft indirect light at one side of screen makes viewing more pleasant. Same rule goes in daytime—so DON'T pull down the shades when you turn on your set.



Keen competition keeps the TV industry always on its toes. In the past two years, improvements have come thick and fast. Result—today's television picture is as easy on the eyes as anything you ever watched.

Positively does NOT cause eyestrain. Seven letters tell the whole story—"MD's OK TV." This means that, with no "ifs" or "buts," America's leading eye doctors give television a clean bill of health. Says the authoritative Journal of the American Medical Association—"Television in itself does not produce eyestrain." Make a point to check this statement with your own eye specialist. He'll tell you—go right ahead and enjoy your favorite television programs for as long a period of time as you would read a book or look at the movies. TV can't hurt your eyes.

Motorola's leadership in cabinet design as well as performance is recognized with the 1950 Fashion Academy Gold Medal Award. Typical example of Motorola supremacy is this Combination Model 17F5. Clear, steady 16" picture, only 2 simple controls, Built-in-Antenna. FM/AM radio, "Multi-play" changer plays all record speeds, price only $429.95. View it at your dealer's along with other beautiful Motorola models from $189.95 to $650.00.
Your eye tells why—Motorola is a better buy.

Sunday School Teacher, 68, Quits—Government Only

The Washington Post
MRS. WOODROW MILLER PINS FLOWER ON MR. BURTON

By Tom Schlesinger
Post Reporter

Fifty-four years ago, as a lad of fourteen, Ishmael Burton—son of an iron puddler—timdily taught his first Sunday school class. It was in a small Methodist church in Clifton, W. Va., his birthplace.

Yesterday, the same Ishmall Burton, silver-haired and saintly, was still at it. The scene this time was the Epworth Church, 13th st. and North Carolina ave. ne., and it was a farewell appearance.

The 68-year-old former chief examiner of the Federal Trade Commission retired last week, and today he was to begin a drive to Los Angeles, where he will settle down and relax.

However, this relaxation includes more Bible school teaching, he said.

His final lesson to the Class of Christian Fellowship concerned the teachings of Jesus about himself.

"Jesus said very little about himself," Burton said. "He was most interested in other people and teaching them to love God and to love their neighbors as their self."

Later in the afternoon, almost 100 of his friends—former pupils and admirers—gathered at a farewell reception at the church. He was presented a gold chain to go with the gold watch given by his fellow workers at the FCC.

He told them a bit of his past, and how many of his pupils have risen and taken their place in important church posts.

"But the greatest pleasure I get," he said, "is still when I receive an unexpected letter from someone who sat in my classes, telling me of the good it has done him."

Burton came to Washington in 1900 and has taught Sunday school here at the Ninth Street Christian, Brentwood Methodist, Mount Vernon Place Methodist, Metropolitan Methodist and Mount Rainier Methodist Churches, as well as Epworth, with whom he has been associated since 1913.

"The classes I've taught have run from the teens to the eighties," he said, "but I'd rather teach the young people.

"I feel the older peoples lives and characters are already formed; the young people, though, they're still pliable and impressionable."

A widower, Mr. Burton made his home at 1313 Lawrence st. nw.

U. S. Agents Seek Fourth Member Of Field Family

BERLIN, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—American investigators tapped sources in the Communist underworld of this four-power city tonight in an attempt to trace the shapely brunette legally adopted by Noel Field, former State Department employe.

There has been no word from the 28-year-old beauty, Mrs. Robert Wallach, since she walked through the swinging doors of Templehof Airport here, August 26. Other members of the Field family to disappear behind the Iron Curtain were Noel, Herta and Hermann.

Mrs. Wallach hinted to friends that she was coming to Berlin to try to trace her foster father. Friends said some of her contacts were among the 10 most prominent Communists purged in East Germany recently.

When she failed to telephone her husband in Paris, confirming her safe arrival, he asked United States authorities to investigate. They found no trace of her.

One on the Aisle—

Ethel's the Hostess With the Mostest

By Richard L. Coe

PERLE MESTA hits the stage tonight in the person of Ethel Merman with the opening of "Call Me Madam" in New Haven.

Not even "South Pacific" had the advance ticket sale that this latest Merman-Irving Berlin combination is getting. It's about $700,000 already and the curtain's not even up; no doubt $800,000 will be in the till by the time the yarn by Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse arrives at Ethel's habitual Gotham stand, the Imperial, on October 9.

As by now everyone must know, Ethel's new role has her playing a character frankly based on our own Mrs. Mesta. Ethel's Minister to a European country called Litchtenstein and one of her songs is called "I'm the Hostess with the Mostest on the Ball." Top price for the Imperial's run will be $7.20, compared with "South Pacific's" $6.

It seems inconceivable that the Merman-Berlin-Lindsay-Crouse musical will be a fizzle, but there's always that chance. The most promising musical since "South Pacific" was "Miss Liberty," by Berlin and Robert E. Sherwood, but that one not only withered in New York, but finally died after the first few weeks of a projected national road tour. To me, that's always been a shame, for "Miss Liberty," wasnt as bad as all that.

Had anyone but Sherwood written the book, it probably would have been much more widely admired. It was a beautiful show to look at and often to listen to, but the unanimous midsummer '49 disappointment was too much to buck.

So, despite the promise, there probably are uneasy hearts today in New Haven. Such resounding anticipation as the record-breaking advance sale reflects can also lead to equally resounding disappointment. Here's hoping the notion of Ethel Merman as Washington's hardworking hostess comes off as well as it sounds.

ANOTHER record-breaking advance has been racked up by the Sadler's Wells Ballet, which opened its 20 weeks in this country last night at the Metropolitan Opera. . . . There's an advance on this of over a million, with some cities on the 17-week tour selling out seven months in advanse, leaving about $900,000 still to be collected for the tour, which, without doubt, will be done. . . . Gotham had been sold out last spring. . . . Nope, the British ballet is NOT coming to the Capital of the United States; as is painfully evident, there's no suitable theater for it.

GLEN ECHO closed for the season last night; too bad the rainy weekend kept so many from enjoying the pool for the last time. . . . Manager Gerald Price reveals that the life guards at the Glen Echo pool pulled 86 persons out of the water during the season, but there were no serious accidents.

THE ALEXANDRIA Little Theater has chosen "The Jealous Wife" as its fifth annual costume revival in Gadsby's Tavern. . . . Dr. Vera Mowry, assistant professor of English at GW, is directing the eighteenth century comedy. . . . A wartime WAVE, Dr. Mowry also devotes her talents to technical assignments at Arena Stage. . . . The Gadsby revival will play the 18th through the 30th.

BRIAN AHERNE, his company and the Olney Theater staff have donated their talents for tonight's American Theater Wing benefit, when "Dear Brutus" will be the attraction in a special Monday night Olney performance . . . Helen Craig, who was so splendid in the stage's original "Johnnq Belinda," and Harry Ellerbe, often the Olney's director, are featured . . . The Tuesday night regulars will be on hand tomorrow night for the official opening, a benefit for the Olney Theater management.

GRACE PEARSON, long the most popular of Cross Roads leading ladies, gets star billing for the Virginia barn theater's "Personal Appearance," which opens its two-week run tomorrow night . . . Apart from the fact that Grace is far too young and pretty to play the hard, aging movie queen of Lawrence Riley's comedy, she's acted it before to bright effect . . . Miss Pearson's leading man is named Dennis Marshall and if he looks vaguely familiar to you Cross Roaders, it's because Director Cecil Willis has taken that as his stage name; he used it before for his roles in "For Love or Money" and "Thank You, Mr. Garrick."

TONIGHT brings the second of the Arena Stage productions in its restyled Hippodrome, "Of Mice and Men." . . . The John Steinbeck drama won both stage and screen awards. . . . In the cast will be Lester Rawlins, Henry Oliver, Dorothea Jackson, Henry Daniłowicz, Jack Carter, Forrest Monroe, Tobe T. Fedder, Harry Scully and Stuart Smith. . . . The lights go down in the little spot at New York ave. and 9th st. at 8:30.

PRETTY AND PETTY: Today's visitors you see above. The inset is of Janis Carter, the Columbia Pictures lovely, who's shepherdessing these four Petty Girls on a tour of the land. They are: Barbara Freking, Dorothy Abbott, Shirley Ballard and Mona Knox. The quintet arrives at National Airport this morning at 9:39, Columbia promises, and you'll see them soon on the Warner screen in, of all things, "The Petty Girl"

THE REAL ISSUES IN THE ALKALI STRIKE*

THE increasing importance of the chemical industry is nowhere more clearly evidenced, unfortunately, than in the presently-indicated shift of major attention of the Lewis brothers, John L. and Denny, to chemicals from coal, in their roughshod, arrogant drive for personal super-power in this country.

The Lewis-instigated 10-week strike of District 50, United Mine Workers, against the Solvay Process Co. is significant because the Lewis tactics and evident aims follow so closely the pattern in the coal industry—to disrupt the industry, imperil the national economy and national security, with the apparent sole aim of giving more personal control in the industry, and power over the American people, to the Lewis clan.

The alkali producers are only one segment of the chemical industry, but a very important segment, at the present time. During the past week, for instance, the soda ash shortage caused by the Lewis-ordered strike has resulted in frantic efforts of Army procurement officials to maintain the flow of glass containers for acid to Korea to prevent immobilization of Army tanks in the war crisis there.

Solvay officials, aware that important customers are now desperately negotiating with foreign sources, not only on spot supplies but on longer term contracts, have gone far in concessions to settle the dispute.

Solvay has offered progressive wage rises over the next three years, a cost-of-living bonus plan similar to that in General Motors to protect workers against possible price inflation, a pension plan comparable with the best offered in other industries including guaranteed-minimum retirement incomes of $100 a month.

Solvay officials desire the maximum in production and sales, which means maximum employment. They realize that loss of business to foreign or other competitors means less money for the owners and for their workers.

In the coal industry, however, the Lewis brothers have evidenced unconcern over the loss of coal markets to competitors caused by their union demands — so long as they increased their personal power and control over those miners still employed.

Similarly, the Lewis-dominated union spokesmen have sneeringly rejected all of Solvay's settlement offers, without indicating any minimum terms they might agree to, eventually.

The key to the terms they seek, however, apparently is to be found in such demands as a pension scheme along the lines of that in the coal industry — which most actuaries claim is unsound as there is no correlation between what is paid in and what is paid out; and, even more significantly, the stipulation that only workers that are loyal union members in good standing with U. M. W. union leaders can qualify for any pension at all, irrespective of length of service or loyalty to the company — or their country.

In this probably the most critical period in our history, the chemical industry is being looked to as the country's major source of strength, as a protection against outbreak of another world war, and, if such a war does develop, as our best hope for eventual victory.

Should the Lewis brothers attain a position where they can hold this industry under such control as they have been able to attain in the coal industry, obviously it would give them a position of tremendous power over the American people. This might be possible if they are allowed to win a spectacular triumph in the Solvay strike.

The Lewis vs. Solvay battle, thus, appears to be an issue of major significance not only to Solvay but to the entire chemical industry and, more important, to the American people.

 Beginning with Solvay, the Lewis Brothers have spread this strike to Diamond Alkali and Wyandotte Chemicals.*

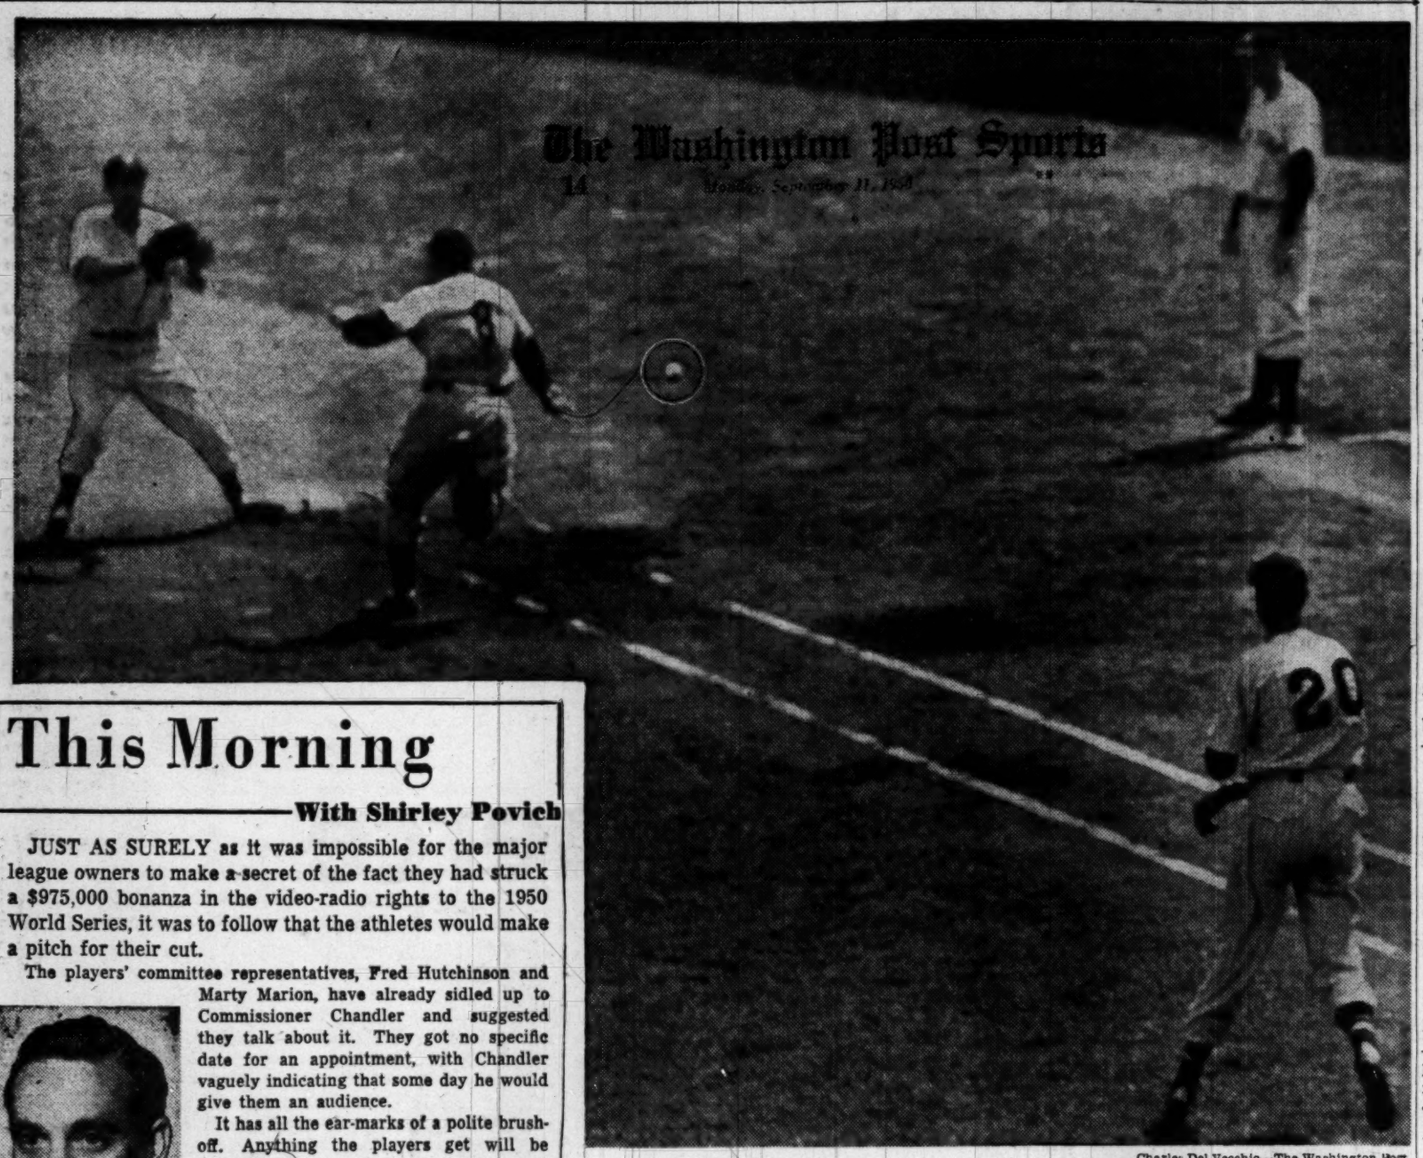
NEW YORK

DiMaggio Slams 3 Homers, Yanks Club Nats, 8 to 1



Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

LOOK OUT, YOGI!—Instead of throwing to First Baseman Mickey Vernon, Pitcher Sid Hudson (20) of the Nats hits Catcher Yogi Berra (8) of the Yankees in the back with the ball after fielding Berra's tap to the mound in the third inning at Griffith Stadium yesterday. Hudson's errant toss enabled Johnny Hopp to score from third base. The New York first base coach is Bill Dickey. The Yanks won the game, 8 to 1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

JUST AS SURELY as it was impossible for the major league owners to make a secret of the fact they had struck a $975,000 bonanza in the video-radio rights to the 1950 World Series, it was to follow that the athletes would make a pitch for their cut.

The players' committee representatives, Fred Hutchinson and Marty Marion, have already sidled up to Commissioner Chandler and suggested they talk about it. They got no specific date for an appointment, with Chandler vaguely indicating that some day he would give them an audience.

Povich

It has all the ear-marks of a polite brush-off. Anything the players get will be largesse, at the will of the owners, and they know the athletes are in no position to make any demands stick. The players committee is a company union, shot through with paternalism, and not organized on any get-tough basis.

Not that the athletes aren't due a healthy share of the newly tapped mine of baseball revenue. They are the guys who are putting on the show that had sponsors frantic to pay for. But they are in a difficult bargaining position.

CHANDLER AND the clubowners never did promise the players anything more than the revenue from the radio rights, which was to go into the athletes' pension fund. The new source of revenue, television, which has come along to dwarf radio in the matter of putting cash in the till, never was a topic between the owners and the players.

And so, actually, the owners are not at all beholden to the athletes in the matter of video sales. Free from any obligations, any concessions the owners do make will stem only from their bounty. The players are going to Chandler with hats in hand when they ask him for a share of the television rights which were knocked down for $800,000 compared to the trivial $175,000 the radio privileges fetched.

The big hammer that the owners hold over the heads of the athletes is that pension fund that guarantees $100 a month to any player who has been in the league for 10 years. It starts paying off when the player reaches the age of 50. They can turn deaf at the players' insistence that the video-radio revenue leaves a lot left over after the pension moneys are guaranteed.

NATURALLY, in the craw of the athletes is their own modest World Series payoff, compared to what the owners are reaping out of both gate receipts and this new video-radio windfall. The players' share of the World Series has not rocketed in any way consistent with the owners' revenue, or the players' season salaries.

Last October, the members of the pennant-winning Yankees got something like $6500 as their individual series share. Fifteen years ago, back as far as 1933, the players were getting that much for winning a World Series. Salaries have almost doubled since that era. Some ballplayers are making $100,000 a year. Their World Series checks, which once represented almost as much as their year's salary, have now become modest takes.

The losing players in the World Series have taken out of it as little as $2140 (the Red Sox in 1946). Ted Williams was playing at a cheaper price in the series than he did through the season despite the fact that players were supposed to get modestly rich for winning the pennant. When they learn of a chunk of almost a million falling into the laps of the owners, their yen for a cut is understandable.

BUT THE PLAYERS committee doesn't carry the same weight it did back in 1945-46 when the Pasquels were raiding the major league clubs and that Boston labor lawyer, Bob Murphy, was threatening to organize a tough-talking players' guild. In that era, the players got almost all they asked for the asking, from frightened club owners.

They got $25 tip money for each week they spent in spring training; they got grievance committees who made the owners listen to their troubles. They demanded curbs on night ball games following double-headers, and were appeased. Larry MacPhail thought up the pension fund to make them happy. Any little thing they wanted . . .

It's different, now chums. The Pasquels are virtually out of the baseball business. Murphy isn't bedeviling the owners any more with his guild. The owners are back in the saddle, and the athletes can make no more stern demands. Their chances of getting a lot of dough out of that $975,000 right now are selling for a sou.

Tigers Split With Chisox, Lead Shaved To ½ Game

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox defeated Detroit's first place Tigers, 3-4, after losing the opener, 1-0, in 12 innings in a double-header before 18,946 persons today.

The split left Detroit in first place a half game ahead of second place New York and a full game in front of third place Boston.

The last three innings were played under lights, marking the first time a Comiskey Park American League daylight game was finished in that manner.

Detroit, blanked on four hits during the first seven innings of the second game as Chicago piled up a 5-0 lead, came to life in the eighth. Don Kolloway opened with his No. 5 home run, a drive into the left field lower deck.

In the ninth, the Bengals blasted Ray Scarborough for four hits as Kolloway doubled for two runs, and a third came across on Johnny Lipon's infield roller.

With Kolloway on second and two out, Kell lined to Baker to clinch Chicago's only victory of the four-game series.

As the game turned out Eddie Robinson supplied the White Sox victory, Scarborough's No. 13 winning decision. Robinson's No. 18 home run with one out in the seventh provided the punch.

Detroit won the opener for Hal Newhouser's fourteenth decision in the third overtime inning of the opener. Hoot Evers opened with a triple, and scored on Groth's single. Randy Gumpert went all the way against Newhouser to suffer his tenth loss as the Tigers out-hit the White Sox, 9-7.

Rain Voids 6-2 Nats' Lead in 2d

Joe First to Do It At Griffith Stadium

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Joe DiMaggio swung a history-making bat—the first that ever bludgeoned three home runs in Griffith Stadium in a single game—and astride his slugging surge the Yankees rode to an 8-1 victory over the Nats.

And then, in the second game of the scheduled double-header, the weatherman got in a lucky punch for the Yanks. Rain, which three times had halted the first game, wiped a 6-2 Yankee deficit off the books after 3½ innings of the finale.

JOE DIMAGGIO

It was a 6-hour, 44-minute program to test the fealty of the most avid fan. The 23,354 in the park, who had seen the twin bill start at 1:30 o'clock, were not discharged from their seats until 8:17 p. m., when the umpires said it was all off.

The lights went on at the start of that second game, and a three-run homer by Sam Mele off Tommy Byrne had the Yankees reeling toward what might have been disaster in their bid to overhaul the pace-setting Tigers, who split with Chicago and now lead by only ½ game.

The show that DiMaggio put on in the opener was all the Yankees needed to beat Sid Hudson. The old jolter, who had hit one homer in three weeks, suddenly awakened to tag Hudson for two wallops into the left field bleachers, bang a third off Mickey Harris, and make a shambles of the contest.

Press box historians agreed that not since the present stadium contours were erected in 1920 had any home run hitter ever deposited three homers of any kind into the same game. President Clark Griffith of the Nats was certain it had never happened.

"None of the great hitters before DiMaggio ever did it," Griffith said emphatically.

With his final wallop, that accounted for the Yankees' last two runs, DiMaggio was making it a perfect day for himself—three homers and a two-bagger in four official trips to the plate.

And in the abbreviated second game, he also served up a pair of thrills for the customers, if not the Nats. In his first time up, he sent Irv Noren back to the center field wall for his long drive that Noren caught with a desperate reach. In his second appearance, he was the victim of a one-hand catch by Johnny Ostrowski near the fence in dead left.

DiMaggio made that first game a breeze for Vic Raschi to post his nineteenth victory over the year. Raschi retired after showers that lasted an hour and 15 minutes delayed the game for the third time. Tom Ferrick pitched the last two innings.

Against Raschi and Ferrick the Nats were a helpless crew. The most notable victim of their four-hit pitching was Irv Noren, whose 21-game hitting streak conked out dismally. In four times at bat, Noren fanned twice, popped up once and grounded out.

DiMag's first homer installed the Yanks in a 1-0 lead in the second inning. He led off with it, the loudest and longest of his

BOSTON, Sept. 10 (AP).—Tom Wright's pinch-hit double with the bases loaded in the eighth inning doomed the Philadelphia Athletics to their twenty-second consecutive setback at Fenway Park by the Boston Red Sox today by a 6-2 margin.

Wright's decisive blow was lashed as he batted for Lefty Chuck Stobbs, who drew credit for the Sockers' twenty-first triumph in their last 22 home starts and their twenty-third in the last 26.

With the score deadlocked at 2-all, Walt Dropo launched the winning rally against righthander Hank Wyse by doubling high off the left field wall with one out. Bobby Doerr drew a base on balls and with two out, Ted Williams batted for Catcher Birdie Tebbetts and was purposely passed to load the bases.

Rain Helps Braves Beat Phils, 3-1

By Ralph Bernstein

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10 (AP).—Pitcher John Sain and a cloudburst that made the field unplayable gave the Boston Braves a five-inning 3 to 1 victory over the National League-leading Philadelphia Phillies today before 14,864 fans at Shibe Park. The rain washed out a sixth inning homer by Phillies' Rookie Jack Mayo and marked the second game this year the Whiz Kids were balked by the elements.

Boston now is seven games behind the Phils and a half game back of the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers who lost 6-4 today to the fourth-place New York Giants. The Giants are 8½ games behind the Phils.

Boston now is only seven games behind the Phils.

Sain picked up his eighteenth victory of the season against 12 defeats as his mates took advantage of two Phil errors to score two unearned runs off right hander Bubba Church who lost his fourth game in 12 decisions.

The Braves netted their winning marker in the fifth inning when Del Ennis made a two-base muff of Buddy Kerr's high fly. Roy Hartsfield singled Kerr home.

The Braves had scored twice in the third inning on one hit, two walks, an error and long fly ball.

In the Phillies' fifth, Church was hit in the leg by a pitched ball, and scored on successive singles by Eddie Waitkus and Willie Jones.

Chief Umpire Babe Pinelli waited one hour, 52 minutes for the rain to let up and then called the game with the score reverting back to the fifth inning.

Today's crowd set a new total season attendance record for the Phillies. The new figure of 1,046,626 eclipsed the 1946 mark of 1,045,247.

Green Bay Wins on Fritsch's Field Goal; Mutryn Runs 100 Yds.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept 10 (AP).—Two sizzling pass catches by Al Baldwin and a 12-yard field goal by Ted Fritsh gave Green Bay a 16-14 National Football league exhibition victory over Baltimore today before a charity crowd of 17,191.

Baldwin's sensational snatches of tosses by Rookie Tobin Rote offset a 100-yard kick-off return by Chet Mutryn.

The fleet Colt halfback grabbed the ball with one foot in his own end zone and outran the packer team down the sidelines.

Rote, the rangy Packer rookie, passed for both scores. A juggling catch of a 43-yard toss by Baldwin set up the first and a 10-yard flip to Tony Canadeo cashed in with seven seconds showing in the second period. Baldwin got the other himself, grabbing a 27-yard heave from the arms of two Colt defenders and skipping 20 yards to score. Fritsch converted the first point, but missed the second.

Baltimore, while losing its seventh straight exhibition game, took an early lead on a short flip from Adrian Burk to Jim Owens in the second quarter. Rex Grossman converted.

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP).—Sid Luckman, the veteran quarterback, led the Chicago Bears to a 10-3 triumph over the champion Philadelphia Eagles in a National Football League exhibition before 38,233 at Wrigley Field today.

With the Bears behind 3-0 in the third quarter, Luckman replaced Johnny Lujack and directed a 49-yard scoring march capped by his own 11-yard touchdown pass to Halfback George Gulyanics.

The Bears sealed the victory in the fourth quarter when Lujak came off the bench to boot a 14-yard field goal. Lujak also added the point after Gulyanic's touchdown.

It was the first Eagle setback in four exhibition starts.

Browns Keep Pouring It On, Sock Indians 4th Time in Row

CLEVELAND, Sept. 10 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns completed a sweep of a four-game series with the Cleveland Indians today, 2-1. An unearned run in the seventh was the margin of victory.

Roy Sievers scored the winning run. He doubled and got to third on an error by Bob Avila whose throw to plate was too late.

Cleveland's run today was the first the Indians earned since the first inning of the series.

Rookie Jim Lemon ended the drought of unearned runs in the seventh when he doubled and ran home on pitcher Bob Feller's single.

Ken Wood scored the first St. Louis run in the first inning. He doubled and went around the bases on two infield outs. Larry Doby in centerfield misjudged Wood's blow and let the ball drop in front of him.

Could Lose Them All

Hoyas Tackle Big Job of Rebuilding

(This is another in a series of articles on area and Southern Conference football teams.)

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

GEORGETOWN could lose all nine of its games this fall. This isn't to say that the Hoyas will lose them all, but they conceivably could.

There's a strong suspicion that they're in over their heads against a lineup of opponents like Penn State, Tulsa, Maryland, Boston College, Villanova, Miami, U. Fla., Fordham, Holy Cross and George Washington.

Coach Bob Margarita says that his 1950 Hoyas are faster, that they have more depth in the line, and that they'll run more than they did last year.

BOB MARGARITA

HERB HEFT

But the speed and depth are provided by Green, untested sophomores who, as a team, could win only one out of four from college freshmen foes last fall.

"We're caught in the switch, and it'll take us a year to get out", says Margarita.

"You could almost say that we wasted last year, and we're starting from scratch.

"When I came here last fall, Georgetown was using the single wing. I switched formations and taught the T.

"It was practically wasted because 60 percent of the players were seniors. In their places are these sophs, whom I must begin all over to teach.

Margarita's greatest disappointment was the loss of his fleet-footed halt-back, Billy Conn, who was flunked out last February.

Nowhere in sight, says Margarita, is anyone who can carry the ball like Conn.

BUGS THOMPSON, the former McKinley Tech High flash, who quit Clemson a couple of years ago so he could play football closer to home, is faster than Conn. But in scrimmages so far, he hasn't been shaking himself loose because he doesn't seem to have the change of pace that Conn had.

Maybe Bugs is hiding it now. Margarita says he hopes Bugs will uncover it at a workout he's planning at William and Mary Saturday. Or better still, he hopes the unveiling will come against Penn State in the opening game a week later.

Thompson's running mate will be a 190-pound sophomore named Gino Pagluica. Gino is one of Margarita's pets. He grew up in Medford, Mass., on the same block as Margarita.

When Margarita was playing with the Chicago Bears, Gino adopted Bob as his football hero, and tried to pattern himself after him. Gino grew up bigger than Bob, and developed into an all-state fullback.

So it was only natural that when Margarita moved in as Georgetown coach, Gino followed him there.

Brightest spot on the team is quarterback where Margarita has a happy choice of Frank Mattingly, Tom Hardiman or Charlie Gagliano.

Mattingly, 6-foot, 4-inch baseball pitcher from Charlotte Hall, Md., who can throw the football with authority too, held the job last year. That was when Margarita said, "Next year, he's going to be one of the best in the business."

Well, this is "next year," and Mattingly is being run out of his job by Hardiman. Tommy was Georgetown's safety man last year and was one of the best in the East.

HE ASKED MARGARITA if he could play more on defense this year, and Bob gave him a shot at quarterback. According to Margarita, Hardiman's ball handling has been something wonderful to see.

"He can't pass with Mattingly, but he hides that ball well, and can hand it off or run with it", says Margarita. "The boys elected him captain, and he's a real take-charge guy. With him in there, I believe we'll have a better running team."

Gagliano, a soph from New Work City, is still too green and isn't crowding Mattingly or Hardiman. But he shows promise.

The Hoya nine will lack experience with only three veterans playing at any one time. And one of the vets, Bob Noppinger, will be at a position strange to him, tackle.

The 220-pounder from Baltimore was the best end on the club, but the Hoyas have four other veteran ends, and Margarita made the change without weakening the flank.

The other two regular veterans are ends Gus Fornarcairi of Farmington, Mass., and Dick Losh of Detroit. Helping them out will be Henry Schmidt of Pittsburgh and Joe Pallotta, another Medford, Mass., product, both lettermen.

Sophomores will hold down all the other regular line positions. at the guards, Jim Schenk of Newark, N. J., at left tackle, opposite Joe Quiring of Chicago and John McGinn of New Orleans will be Noppinger, and Jim Slowey of Scranton will be at center.

As understudies, Margarita can call on Sheldon Oremland of Washington and Jack Dunn of Philadelphia, tackles, Bud Schuster of Iowa and Mike Carra of Hempstead, L. I., guards, and Bob Keller, of Newark, N. J., center.

Oremland, 215-pounder, played at Roosevelt High and William and Mary before the war, and came out of the service to play a year at Montgomery Junior College.

Jim Ferrier Second, 8 Strokes Back

READING, Pa., Sept. 10 (AP).—Sammy Snead sloshed through the rain and mud with his fourth straight sub par round today to grab top money in the $15,000 Reading Open golf tournament with a record smashing 268, 20 under par for the Berkshire Country Club Course.

Snead, playing his finest golf since May, won by eight strokes over his closest competitor, Jim Ferrier of San Francisco, who came home with 276 to take second money by a stroke from Glenn Teal of Jacksonville, Fla.

The White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., hotshot shattered the competitive course record by one stroke. Ben Hogan held the old mark of 269 set in 1948.

Victory was worth $2600 to Snead. The West Virginian turned in his poorest round of the tournament today, playing the final six holes in a driving downpour. He went over par three times, on the fifth, sixth and fifteenth, but he birdied five and pared 10.

Ted Kroll, New Hartford, N. Y. and the leader at the 18 and 36 hole mark, skyrocketed for the second straight day, finishing with a 74 that gave him a 72 hole total of 282 and a share in 10th place.

Cary Middlecoff of Ormond Beach, Fla., winner of the $15,000 tournament last year, wound up in a tie for 17th place.

Carnera-Rocca Meet Tonight

The irrseistible force, Antonino Rocca, meets the immovable object, Primo Carnera, tonight in a wrestling match at Griffith Stadium which promises to be the best show the grunt and groan boys have put on locally in some time.

It will be the third meeting between Carnera, the former mammouth former heavyweight boxing champ, and Rocca the Argentine strong man. Rocca won the first match several years ago. Their second ended in a draw.

Devotees of women's wrestling will have their moment in a bout between Ann LaVerne of Canton, Ohio, and Ellen Olsen of Philadelphia.

In other matches, "Lord" Leslie Carlton, a British wrestler, takes on Roland Meeker, Shreveport, La., The Golden Superman clashes with Kola Kwariani, and Francois McGuite meets Bud Curtis.

Promoter Mrs. Florence Turner has moved the mat from the infield back to home plate to give spectators a closer look at the goings on. The bouts begin at 8:45 p. m., and tickets will be on sale today at the ball park only.

DiMag's 3 Homers Ruin Nats, 8 to 1

wallops far into the stands in dead left.

The Yanks came up with a couple of more runs off Hudson in the second on a walk to Raschi, an accidental single by Hopp, and a broken-bat single by Bauer.

And then in the sixth, DiMag tagged Hudson again. Ed Stewart drifted back to the bleacher wall as if to snare the drive, but it spilled into the seats over his head.

As if in apology for a dinky two-bagger he hit in the seventh, DiMaggio wound up again in the ninth against Mickey Harris. That wallop arched comfortably into the left field seats, not as long as No. 1, but not as short as No. 2.

The Nats' only run off Raschi was launched by Sid Hudson's single in the sixth. Stewart scored him with a single. Going into that sixth, Raschi was pitching a one-hitter.

Tommy Byrne was threatening to pitch the Yankees into an even break for the day in that second game. The Nats jumped him for four runs in the first after he walked two men. Vernon's single got one home, and then Mele whacked a solid homer into the left field seats, his eleventh of the year. It was loaded with three runs.

Irv Noren got two runs home in the second with a triple off Joe Ostrowski to give the Nats a 6-1 lead at that point. And then, two-innings later—he bid wash-out.

IN SHORT . . . DiMaggio has hit four home runs since Aug. 20, all of them off Washington pitching . . . There was a spy in the place yesterday. George Earnshaw, of the Phillies' staff, was scouting the Yanks just in case they meet the Phils in the World Series. He'll shift to the Tigers if they look like the winners . . . Washington players were ranting that DiMag's second home run was a phoney, and that a bleacher fan reached out and hauled it into the seats . . . Umpire Charley Berry was doubling as chief of the ground crew, wigwagging orders like an Eagle Scout between showers . . . Johnny Hopp's first hit as a Yankee was an accidental single to left on a pitch he was trying to duck . . . Today's pitchers will be Al Sima for the Nats and Ed Ford for the Yankees, a pair of freshmen lefthanders.

GOOD CATCH—An unidentified bleacherite makes a bare-handed stab of Joe DiMaggio's No. 2 home run against the Nats yesterday as Outfielder Eddie Stewart backs up against the wall and jumps high trying to catch the ball (arrow). DiMaggio kept the bleacher fans loose, spraying three homers into the stands in the first game

Signals Switched, Cuban Crew Jumps Happily Into Creek

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Sept. 10 (AP). — The Havana Biltmore Yacht Club's five-man crew stroked to an exciting victory today on Indian Creek in the annual "Cuba Day" regatta.

A newspaper photographer suggested it was an old American custom to toss the coxswain of the winning crew into the water.

But the Cubans, who understood little English, got it twisted and the entire crew happily jumped into the creek.

Giants Stop Bums, 6-4, on 3 Homers

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP).—Home runs by Monte Irvin, Bob Thomson and Wes Westrum paced the New York Giants to a 6-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers today. Larry Jansen went the distance to rack up his sixteenth victory. Jansen allowed seven hits including home runs by Bobby Morgan and Gil Hodges.

A crowd of 27,602 saw the Giants lace into Don Newcombe from the very start. The big Negro righthander, in his first outing since starting both games of a double-header against the Phillies last Wednesday, gave Leo Durocher's boys all of their six runs and six of their eight hits in the four innings he pitched. He was lifted for a pinch-hitter and was charged with his ninth defeat.

Among the hits alowed by Newcombe were the homers by Irvin, Westrum and Thompson. The latter two came with none on base, but Irvin's was delivered with one on after the Giants had already scored once in the first inning and sent them off to a 3-0 lead.

In Cup Meet

Bettie Roland Sets American Swim Record

By Gordon Beard

Bettie Roland of Takoma Park set an American record for the women's 150-meter individual medley in the President's Cup swim meet at the Indian Spring Country Club last night.

Miss Roland won in 2:03.6, eclipsing a mark which had stood for nine years. Lorainne Fisher of the Women's Swimming Association, New York, posted the old record of 2:06.5 on June 22, 1941.

The time will now go to the National Amateur Athletic Association for approval.

A driving rain fell throughout the meet and caused the low-board diving to be moved indoors.

In addition to the national mark, two meet records went into the books.

Mary Ann Walsh of the Scranton, Pa., Swimming Association, twice broke the women's 100-meter freestyle record, doing 1:13.2 in the afternoon trials and came back in the evening finals with a 1:13.1 effort. The previous record was 1:14, set last year by Bettie Roland.

In a trial heat, Al Hobelmann of the Ambassador Swimming Club, Washington, swam the boys' 50-meter free style race in 30.1, erasing the record of 30.6 set by Jim Lalor of Takoma Park in 1949. Hobelmann won the finals in 30.2.

Bill Fleming of Ambassador and Lewis Hamburger of the Y-Brook, Baltimore, equaled the meet record of 38.9 in the boys' 50-meter breaststroke event in the trials. George Murray of Ambassador won the finals, however, in 39.5.

Dominion Team Gets Bad Breaks

By Happy Walker

The Potomac Boat Club won the President's Cup rowing regatta yesterday on the Georgetown Channel during an afternoon of heavy rains.

In the first half of the program, Neried Boat Club, New York, was ahead, but with Kado Beachem, Dave Scofield, Stick Groom, Foster Smith, Milt Irwin, Wes Dalby, Roger Scott, Pete Sparhawk, John Byer, Red Morse, Tom Cook, Ed Cox, Paul Yager, Steve Stephanson, Dick Zollner, Frank Smith and Bob Quackenbush scoring heavily, Potomac B. C. won the team trophy with 84 points.

Most of the above mentioned oarsmen were members of the Washington-Lee national high school championship rowing team coached by Charlie Butt.

Other club standings: Neried B. C., 53; Bachelor Barge B. C., Philadelphia, 20; Ravenswood B. C., New York, 17; Old Dominion B. C., Alexandria, 8; West Side Rowing C., 6; La Salle College, Pa., 6, and New York Athletic C., 4.

Hard luck befell Old Dominion B. C. when, in the senior four-oared shell event, it was in the lead and but a short distance from the finish line, one of the oarsmen missed a stroke which threw the crew off its stride, costing the race to Neried B. C., and giving Old Dominion B. C. second honors. In the senior quad scull event, Old Dominion was disqualified by the judges because they were "out of their water."

The power boat events of the President's Cup Regatta Association will be held on September 16 and 17 on the Georgetown Channel, and the sail races will take place off Hains Point, September 23 and 24.

Dot Kielty Favored in Amateur Golf

Atlanta, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—The country's leading lady golfers tee off Monday for their Fiftieth National Amateur Championship on the historic East Lake Country Club course.

The event shapes up as Dorothy Kielty against the field for the title and will be packed with sentimental overtones. Alexa Stirling herself, now Mrs. W. G. Fraser of Ottawa, will compete as a gesture to the past.

Miss Kielty, the California girl who ferried planes during the last war, rates an odds-on choice in the field of 157, which includes the entire British Curtis Cup Team. Dot has never won the National, but she has snared nearly every other big title, including the Western Open in 1948.

Atlanta faithful believe that home-grown Dorothy Kirby, always a bridsmaid in the National, has her best chance this year on the fast Bermuda Greens to which she is accustomed.

Western Amateur Champion Polly Riley, Peggy Kirk, Findlay, Ohio.; Grace Lenczyk, Newington, Conn.; Mary Agness Wall, Menominee, Mich., and Carol Diringer, Tiffin, Ohio., are others in the big-name field.

The girls will engage in match play, Monday through Saturday.

Heartache, But No Bitterness, Says Thomas Leaving Prison

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 10 (U.P.)—Former New Jersey Congressman J. Parnell Thomas was released today from Federal prison—thin, ailing and lamenting that his 8½ months in jail were "no pink tea party" but a "heartache" he'll never forget.

"Freedom is wonderful," said the 55-year-old onetime chairman of the House un-American Committee. He puffed on a 15-cent corncob pipe as he walked out to freedom on parole after serving almost nine months of a six to 18-months sentence. He was convicted of payroll padding and accepting salary kickbacks from his congressional employes.

"Eight and one-half months in the Danbury pen is no pink tea party," Thomas said in a prepared statement. "My weight alone dropped 35 pounds from 166 to 131. The experience will never be forgotten.

"Aside from the drudgery, it was a vivid study in human nature and an opportunity to examine our Federal penal system from within.

"It will go down in memory for me along with my overseas duty as an infantry captain in World War I, with my hectic days of planning, plotting, investigating and exposure as chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, with the critical months I spent in Margherita Hospital in Panama and in Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C., which culminated in the removal of most of my stomach and with the 20 years of heartaches and joy in serving others."

The former New Jersey Republican is suffering from high blood pressure, doctors said, and underwent an abdominal operation in prison.

"From my incarceration, there is no bitterness in my heart," Thomas said. "I paid a high price for vigilance, but I intend to make the best of it. I am confident I shall in due time be judged innocent of any wrongdoing."

Thomas was convicted and fined $10,000 last November on a charge of padding his congressional payroll and making his employes give back to him part of their salaries.

He was locked up in the Federal correctional institution here last December 9. He refused to comment on how he raised the money to pay the fine nor would he talk about a well-paying job reported waiting for him in New Jersey.

Dr George G. Killinger, chairman of the Federal Prison Board, said Thomas "is in very poor physical condition."

Reemployment Rights To Be Ordered for Civil Service Workers

Reemployment rights will be ordered soon for Civil Service employes with regular status who are transferred to defense jobs.

The order is being drafted by the Civil Service Commission. It should be issued this week.

It will give a job guarantee to a status employe who is asked to transfer to a defense job. The employe will then have the opportunity to return to his old job if he applies for it within 30 days after his defense job is abolished. A similar system was used during World War II.

Status employes have been reluctant to accept defense jobs. They hesitated to give up their permanent jobs for temporary jobs of uncertain tenure. The order giving them reemployment rights will speed up the transfer of able and experienced people to new and vital defense activities.

RIDER SHOWDOWN: This week, too, will bring a showdown on the House rider to require all promotions, transfers and reinstatements to be made on a temporary basis.

Administration forces have urged the Senate Appropriations Committee to drop the rider as too rigid and a barrier to defense recruiting. The House amendment has Senate support, but it may be watered down a bit by the Senate.

As explained here Saturday, the rider is now in effect and it has been since September 2, when the President signed into law the emergency resolution which allowed Federal agencies to spend money carried in the supplemental budget bill. The amendment is a rider to that bill and legal experts have declared that it, too, is law and will remain so unless the Senate strikes it out.

Civil Service officials are sympathetic to the objectives of the House rider. They, too, want to hold down grade promotions and they don't want to overload the Government with permanent employes. But they are convinced that the rider is premature and that it would be a decided drawback to the recruitment of people both in and out of Government for defense work.

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: Senate-House conferees will try again this week to reach an agreement on the different bills to revamp the efficiency rating system. They have decided that employes should be rated either unsatisfactory, satisfactory, or outstanding.

The major difference between the conferees is whether employes rated satisfactory should be allowed to appeal for outstanding, as the House group advocates, or if appeals should be limited to employes rated unsatisfactory as the Senate conferees propose. The Administration is backing the Senate plan.

COMMERCE today will begin to build up a staff to handle defense work delegated to it by the President. Job priority will be given to former employes who were laid off in reductions of force. In addition, the department has scores of employes who were formerly employed in the World War II agencies and many of them will be asked to transfer to allocations and priorities work.

No one knows for sure how much of a staff Commerce will require to handle its defense work. Obviously, it will depend on the extent to which economic controls are applied, and that, in turn, depends on the international situation.

But tentative plans call for a staff of 1500 by next April. But as one official explained, the number by that time could be 500 or it could be 5000.

Agriculture, Interior, Labor, Interstate, Commerce and other agencies given new defense duties are all in the same boat. They plan modest defense staffs now, but if full mobilization is ordered, they will need many more employes.

NOTES: The 1952 budgets of all Federal agencies are supposed to be submitted to the Budget Bureau this week . . . The Senate may delay confirmation of the entire slate of five RFC directors nominated by the President until next year . . . The first batch of non-defense budget cuts has been made by the Budget Bureau. A minimum of 550 millions must be trimmed from this year's budget by the bureau on direction from Congress.

New Record Enrollment Expected in D. C. Schools

96,571 Children Foreseen as Total Here; Fall Term Will Begin Today

A record-breaking enrollment of 96,571 children, about 1500 more than last year, is expected in District schools during the semester which begins today.

In the area, as a whole, including nearby Virginia schools which opened last week, and Prince Georges and Montgomery County schools in Maryland, which open today, a total of 223,500 is expected. This is 10,500 more than last year.

Enrollments may not reach this total the first day—there are always children who ignore the first bell—but a full complement is expected within a few weeks.

In Prince Georges, 31,500 youngsters will crowd into the classrooms, an increase of 3000. Montgomery teachers are planning on an enrollment of 28,000, which will exceed last year's total by 4000.

Already back in classes are the 30,000 parochial school students in the Archdiocese of Washington, 13,000 public school students in Fairfax County, 8000 in Alexandria and 16,000 in Arlington.

Facing Draft

Jobless Youth Kills Self At 'Roulette'

Out of work, facing a draft examination, separated from his wife, Lindy Pettitt played Russian roulette at a "soft drink" party late Saturday night and lost—his life.

The 22-year-old youth, who lived at 633 E st. ne., shot himself to death. The "game," once favored by Russian army officers, consists of placing a partially loaded revolver against the head, spinning the chamber and pulling the trigger.

Police said Pettitt's .32 caliber revolver contained two bullets.

He was attending a party at 1018 4th st. ne., in honor of the forty-third birthday of Mrs. Ida Briggs of the 4th st. address.

About 11:30 p. m. Saturday, police said, the party was breaking up, party-goers were leaving.

Pettitt went out on the porch and, while several people looked on, mentioned something about the "game." Then, said police, Pettitt tried his luck.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Sibley Hospital.

Police said Pettitt was scheduled for a preinduction physical September 18. Married only two months, his wife, Frances, was living with her mother, detectives reported.

District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death.

North Carolinian, Sought 14 Months, Injured in Fall

Injured in a 25-foot fall while trying to elude police Saturday night, Leon Whitaker, 28, of Henderson, N. C., was in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital last night with head injuries and a fractured right leg.

Police were seeking Whitaker on two counts—a 14-month-old warrant charging assault, and his brother's complaint to police that Whitaker stole and pawned his watch.

About 7 p. m. Saturday, police went to the janitor's quarters at 2716 Porter st. nw., occupied by the brother, William, 30.

Leon Whitaker ran to the third floor of the building and swung onto a drainpipe from a hall window. He had slid about 30 feet, police said, when he apparently lost his hold and fell to a concrete areaway.

Appreciative Home-Lovers See Modern Decor, Efficient Interiors as House Exhibit Starts

Thousands Agree Current Show Best Staged in D. C. Area

By Lucia Brown
Post Reporter

Mud was on the carpets, but appreciation was in the eyes of thousands who visited the "Homes of '50" yesterday.

Despite intermittent downpours, Washington area home-lovers filled the model houses from noon 'til dusk, admiring beautiful interiors, efficient kitchens, roomy clothes closets, and a dozen other features.

They came, they saw, and they concurred in judging the show the best of the three annual ones staged to date by The Washington Post. In many cases, the whole family was there—everybody from babes in arms to a 93-year-old great-grandmother.

Walked Plank

At the "Home of '50" in Fairfax County, thousands "walked the plank" across the muddy yard to see the interior furnished by Peerless Modern House. Light, contemporary furniture drew much favorable comment. So did such features as recessed lighting in the ceilings, an open "pass-through" in the kitchen wall, and a bathroom sink with two mirrors—a high one for adults and a low one for children. These were installed by builder Jonathan Woodner.

The price of the furnishings made a hit at the Reliance "Home of '50" in Annandale, Va. Frank Michelbach, Inc., of Alexandria, kept the cost for decorating under $2700, just a bit more than a fourth the price of this prefabricated house. Blonde woods and gay colors made the most of the surprisingly spacious interior.

Breakfront Stirring

The Chippendale breakfront in the living room of the M. T. Broyhill "Home of '50" in Arlington was drawing more comment than almost anything else, Miss Rosalie De Voto of the Biggs Antique Co. said. Behind its glass-paned door were many lovely porcelains and other objects d'art.

The way small rooms were enlarged by the use of color was particularly noted by many visitors at the Georgetown "Home of '50." The rich new House and Garden shade of mustard, or old mustard, or old gold, was used for carpeting and walls throughout the lower floor. The classic beauty of the Regency furniture also drew many comments in this house, decorated by Woodward and Lothrop and built by John de Sibour.

"Adorable" Draperies

Johnny Appleseed wallpaper and draperies in the Somerset, Md., house was acclaimed "adorable" by feminine visitors. They were equally appreciate of other gay fabrics in the house, and of a unique folding shutter covered with quilted fabric. William E. Miller furnished this O. F. Smith house.

A modernistic painting on the living room wall and a low coffee table made of alternating strips of light and dark wood caused much favorable talk in the "Home of '50" furnished by Milton Rossler, Inc. All furnishings are strictly modern in style with one room entirely of glass in this home, built by Twin-Brook, Inc., in Rockville, Maryland.

Six Bedrooms

Classic white draperies, against blue-green Chinese wallpaper, attracted visitors with an eye for beauty at the Wesley Heights "Home of '50." The six bedrooms, examples of a variety of decorative periods, also proved of much interest. W. C. and A. N. Miller built this house, furnished by Mayer and Company.

Kitchens got lots of comments, too. For instance, there was the spacious, hemlock-paneled one in the Fairfax County house built by Henry de Longfief. Also admired was the blue-and-white one, complete with dishwasher, garbage disposal unit, and all the fixings—in the A. D. Jerkins "Home of '50" in Wellington Heights, Va. All in all, the visitors seemed grateful to be getting away from the pint-sized kitchen once so favored.

Jewry to Begin Celebration Of New Year at Sundown

Jews throughout the world will begin obervance of Rosh Hashonoh, the beginning of their New Year, at sundown today.

In temples and synagogues throughout the city a record attendance is expected with all reserved seats in many places sold for several weeks.

With the New Year, Jews begin a period of ten days of prayer and penitence which come to a climax on Yom Kippur, the most solemn day of the religious year.

According to the Jewish system of computation, the creation of the earth took place 3760 years before the beginning of the Christian era. For this reason, the Hebrew calendar records the beginning of the Holy Day as the 1st of Tishre, 5711.

Rosh Hashonoh will be observed for two days by Orthodox and Conservative Jews, and for one day by Reform congregations. Yom Kippur is observed for one day by all groups.

Man, 26, Dies After Shooting

Shot by a young Washington Terminal policeman in an early morning fracas over parking at Union Station, Oliver Davis, 26, of 1316 Wallach pl. nw., died yesterday at Casualty Hospital.

Wounded seriously was Ernest F. Pearson, 22, of Philadelphia. He was in critical condition last night at Casualty Hospital with a bullet wound in the left groin.

Daniel Wolff, 22, of 7327 Forest rd., Kent Village, Md., plainclothes private in the terminal police, was released in custody of his superior on a technical charge of hold-for-the-coroner.

Capt. W. A. Peal, of the terminal police, said Wolff has been withheld from duty pending a coroner's inquest. Date for an inquest has not been set.

Metropolitan Police said that about 12:15 a. m. Davis and Pearson tried to park a sedan in the baggage garage under the west end of Union Station.

Wolff told police the pair attacked him when he approached the sedan to tell them not to park.

After he was knocked down, police quoted Wolff, he fired his .38 caliber revolver at the men.

One of the attackers, the police version said, then grabbed the weapon and pistol-whipped Wolff.

A baggage porter, John Ackers, ran to Wolff's assistance and snatched the revolver from the attacker.

HOMES—From Page 1

Thousands Brave Heavy Rains To See 'Homes of '50' Exhibit century homes and home furnishings are well worth viewing.

In a broadcast at 12:30 p. m. yesterday over Station WTOP, marking the opening of the homes, Clarke Daniel, president of the Home Builders Association of Metrooplitan Washington, reported that residential construction here is up 174 percent over last year.

Right now, he said, about 13,000 houses are under construction in the area.

Plenty of Evidence

Plenty of evidence was available yesterday of the interest in homes that has brought about this vast building volume. At one model home after another, couples sat down with sales agents to find out all about them.

They studied blueprints, discussed financing methods, inquired about the distance to stores, churches, schools. They checked into the cost of making alterations here and there, of completing unfurnished second floors, of making the basement into a recreation room.

Builder R. H. Best, whose model home is in McDonald Knolls, Silver Spring, dosclosed that he sold six houses yesterday. Other builders reported several sales. Realtor J. Wesley Buchanan, agent for the "Home of '50" in Rock Creek Hills, Md., constructed by Wesmond Building and Investment Co., asserted, "I only wish I had a dozen like them."

So it went. Rain notwithstanding, representatives of builders and furniture stores at the homes had all they could do to take care of the hundreds of persons who visited them.

"Miracle of America"

To Thornton W. Owen, president of the Washington Board of Trade, the "Homes of '50" are an instance of the "miracle of America." Also a speaker on the "kickoff" broadcast, Owen cited them as an example of free enterprise and the "right to pick and choose."

Others on the program included Oliver Walker, president of the Washington Real Estate Board; J. R. Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post; Maury Nee, president of the National Retail Furniture Association, and Mrs. Lois Wannan, home furnishings coordinator for Woodward and Lothrop.

A map listing directions to each exhibit house was carried yesterday in the "Homes of '50" section of this newspaper. It will be printed again in the real estate section of The Washington Post next Sunday.

Petition Issued For Removal of Wilson President

Two Offices

House Crime Unit Plans New Studies

The House District crime investigating subcommittee this week will look into operation of the United States Commissioner's office and that of the District coroner.

Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) told The Washington Post from his Stone Mountain, Ga., home yesterday the hearings also will continue investigations begun last spring of bonding company operations and of after-hours bottle clubs here.

In addition, a conference is planned this week with Juvenile Court Judge Edith H. Cockrill, Davis said. It may lead to hearings on District juvenile problems.

Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach explained that the Congressmen want to determine whether the coroner's and commissioner's offices should continue to be run as at present.

Cyril S. Lawrence, United States Commissioner here, and Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, will appear as witnesses as the study of their offices gets under way today, Fischbach said.

He said that the trend in the United States is to confine the coroner's function to that of medical examiner, turning over the coroner's jury duties to the grand jury. The commissioner's job is that of a magistrate, Fischbach noted, and could be performed by the United States District Court. There have been suggestions from time to time that the commissioner's office be abolished.

Davis said the committee has no present intention of reopening last spring's Police Department row between Superintendent Robert J. Barrett and Capt. Anthony Richitt.

The hearings are due to begin at 10 a. m. today and probably will continue through Wednesday.

Dr. Hager Is Hit For Move To End Segregation in Teachers Colleges

A petition for the removal of Dr. Walter E. Hager as president of Wilson Teachers College, because he wants to end segregation in the District school system is being circulated here, it was learned last night.

Doctor Hager recently proposed the merger of the city's white and Negroe teachers' colleges within the next five years or sooner, as the first step in ending segregation in the school system.

Confirmation that the petition was being circulated came last night from John H. Connaughton, former president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, who is among those having a copy of the request.

Gist of Petition

The gist of the petition is that Dr. Hager should be ousted because "his recommendation goes against established practices here," Connaughton said.

The civic leader said a number of citizens got together and drew up the document and a dozen or two copies are being circulated.

The present president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, Herbert P. Leeman, said the group has no connection with the petition. In fact, he said, he had not heard of the move before being queried about it by the reporter.

Dr. Hager's proposal was made in his annual report, sent not only to Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning, but also to school officers, members of the Board of Education and the faculty of the college.

He described consolidation of Wilson with the Negro Miner College as "logical and eminently desirable." He said that the Nation's capital should provide "liberty and equality" to Negroes if the United States is to maintain its position and successfully combat communism abroad.

Suggests A Merger

His recommendation was also based on his observations that segregation generally is breaking down here, and that students at the two colleges are ready for a merger.

"Nonsegregated schools seem to be in prospect as surely as is the ultimate victory of right over wrong," the report said.

Dr. Hager, whose views brought mixed reactions from members of the Board of Education, has been president of the teachers' college for nine years. As in other educational posts in the District, the tenure is indefinite.

Dr. Hager had no comment on the petition.

14th Annual P-TA Institute Planned Here

A demonstration of methods used in District schools in training students to read or to improve reading skills will feature the fourteenth annual Parent-Teacher Institute.

The two-day conference to be held September 18 and 19 in Lisner Auditorium will be on the general theme of the relationship between the home and the school.

Mrs. A. J. Nicely, vice president of the National Conference of Parents and Teachers, will speak at the opening session to be held at 10 a. m. The demonstration will be held at 7:30 p. m. when a group of first grade students under the direction of Miss Ann B. Dessez, teacher at the Truesdell School, will show parents what they have learned during the first week of school.

Dean James Harold Fox of the George Washington University school of education will speak at the meeting at 10 a. m. September 19.

Here Is the Secret of Caring for Your Hair at Home

Ninth Day of Margaret's Beauty Program

By Ann Lawrence

MARGARET shampoos her hair, sets it in curl pattern she learned from Raymond

HAVING your hair done in a beauty parlor every week is a far cry (both in time, convenience and money) from setting your own hair . . . in between classes, between nightly study periods, just before an all-important date.

Margaret rightly demanded to know just how she could manage, in the dormitory, the sleek, flattering hair-do Raymond had given her in his salon.

It all boiled down to a plan for hair beauty, a plan to be followed as faithfully as a classroom schedule.

Here's how Margaret worked it out.

Once a week, she will shampoo her hair, with a pure castille shampoo, followed by a cream rinse to remove all soap, leave her hair silky-smooth and help bring out its glowing highlights.

While her hair is still wet, she will comb out each tangle, with a large-toothed comb. Next, she will wrap her head in a towel, perhaps study for an hour. When her hair is almost dry, she will use a new metal pin curl that makes setting a cinch for the rankest amateur. This is a new little gadget that slips right over the curl, as you pull your finger away from the scalp, and clamps it firmly in place. Separated into two parts, it allows the hair to dry faster.

FASHIONED of metal, it is long lasting. And because of the design, much like a bobby pin with a wave in the center, it coaxes the hair into large, loose curls. Thus, when the hair is taken down, there is no fuzz and kink. Margaret particularly likes this clasp for the way it opens: all by itself, with slight pressure on the end, so that there is no nail breaking, as she opens it.

In practicing, she followed the same curl-pattern she had learned from Raymond, illustrated in the large picture on this page. When the set had completely dried, she cribbed another trick from the beauty parlor and brushed her hair out thoroughly before combing it through. In the second picture Raymond shows her how to lift her hair with the brush, massaging and stimulating her scalp as she works through the curls. In the third picture, Margaret herself goes through the brushing motions, just as she will in her own dormitory room.

That's her once-a-week program. Nightly, she will brush her hair, using a stiff bristle, curved handle brush. Nightly, she will massage her scalp, working from the nape of her neck forward to the hairline. This, too, she can manage while she studies. She can rest her elbows on her desk, cup her head in her hands, and rotate her fingers,

MARGARET studies while her hair dries. Front hair is put in with new metal pin curl gadgets

SHE BRUSHES her hair in the new way she has learned. Daily brushing will keep it soft in tiny circular movements, all over her head.

DURING our experiment, Margaret brushed her hair every night. She was afraid that this brushing would disturb the wave and curl. But she found, to her surprise, that her set lasted even longer with such treatment, that the brushing helped to keep the wave in place.

Every 10 days, she will massage a hair-conditioner into her scalp. She'll use a tonic that is especially compounded to prevent a dry, flaky scalp and guard against dandruff.

With her new hair-do, Margaret found that her nightly pin-curl task was not necessary. Curls every three days would suffice.

Slipcover the Pictures In Your Child's Room For Charming, Novel Effect

SLIP-COVERING the pictures on the wall may sound a bit odd, but it can provide a charming answer to G. T.'s question.

Dear Anne:

I have some cute pictures of animals that I would like to use in my small daughter's room, which we are now doing over. Have you any suggestions of unusual and colorful ways to frame them? G. T., Takoma Park.

Are you slip-covering a chair for the room? If so, get enough material to frame the pictures to match. A gay check, print, dot, even stripe can make a grand "slipcover" frame for a child's picture. They can be taken off and washed when they become dirty, or changed when you change the color scheme of the room.

If prints are unmatted, paste each on a piece of cardboard two or three inches wider on all sides than the picture. Make slipcover for the front as big as the cardboard rectangle and with a hole in the middle the size of the picture. Sew narrow ruffle around the outer edge and make a little hem around the inside opening. Sew tapes to the corners so that the cover can be tied on criss-cross in the back. The same procedure can be followed with pictures that are already framed or matted.

Dear Anne:

All my furniture is dark mahogany. The end tables have inlaid leather and the dining room table has brass claw feet. I am wondering just what I should do to keep them in tip-top condition. I was told when I bought the furniture a year ago that wax was not satisfactory in this climate as the humidity causes it to become white and gummy.

Mrs. T. L. Gray, 1701 Massachusetts ave. nw.

If wax is properly applied, you shouldn't have this trouble, Mrs. Gray. The trick is to spread the wax on thinly, when the surface is thoroughly dry.

Put a small lump of paste wax in a generous square of cheesecloth and work it all through the cloth. Go over the clean surface of the furniture with this, rubbing in the direction of the grain, leaving a thin coating of wax. Let it dry for a few minutes, then buff to a satiny glow with a fresh cloth.

Such waxings should be infrequent. Once every three months should be adequate. Always clean the surface first. This can be done by washing a small area at a time with a solution of mild soap and water. Rinse the spot with a cloth wrung out of clean water and dry with a fresh cloth immediately so that water will not stand on the surface.

Special waxes or conditioners made for use on leather are better for the leather tops, though furniture wax can be used.

DEAR ANNE:

I'd like to know the difference in caloric value between ice cream, sherbet, and water ice. Lois Greene, Washington.

The answer to this question depends partially on the flavor of the ice cream! One half cup of plain vanilla ice cream is around 100 calories, for instance, while chocolate runs about 250 calories.

The maker has a lot to do with the calories in the cream, too. Commercial ice cream is often less fattening than the home-made kind. If real cream is poured in with a heavy hand, the calories climb and climb. And if you add nuts! Well!

The average sherbet would run about 115 calories per half cup. If made entirely with water, the total would be slightly less.

"Babes" Railey Travels With Dogs, Birds, Sons

By Marie McNair

WHO, of all people, should land in town the other day but "Babes" Railey, trailed by two young and handsome sons; two dogs, a pair of canaries, a smart French car, and a new divorce.

The former Mrs. Howard Railey, who enlivened the Washington scene a few years back, is fresh from France where she left Howard Railey and his new wife, Sue Rosenberg, formerly of D. C.

Babes, a bit plumper, but every bit as fascinating, is bound for Ormond Beach, Fla., to settle in the town where her grandmother lived for many years, and to establish a kennel for breeding toy French poodles.

At Mrs. Morris Cafritz's small luncheon at the Colony last week, Mrs. Railey caught up with the news of old friends. She also divulged some herself. She was a guest at the wedding reception of her former husband and the new Mrs. Railey given by the American Ambassador to France and Mrs. David K. E. Bruce.. Mr. Railey one-time Civil Air Attache of the United States Embassy, has now, I understand, a job with an airplane company in Paris.

Carpenter, 43, Daughter, Die In Home Fire

A Prince Georges County carpenter and his 6-year-old daughter were burned to death early yesterday in a fire that gutted their three-room house in Forestville, Md.

The dead man's wife, in an effort to save her husband and child, was seriously injured and burned. Only the restraints of neighbors prevented her from entering the blazing home.

Two other children in the family ran from the fire in their nightclothes. They were not injured.

Dr. James I. Boyd, a Prince Georges medical examiner, said Owen Thomas, 43, and Carol Ann Thomas, 6, died of burns. Shock and asphyxia were contributing factors.

He said he would withhold a certificate of death until cause of the fire is determined.

Neighbors said shortly after midnight, Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, 41, had put her children to bed and left her home on Brown Station rd., about a mile east of the Marlboro pike in Forestville.

She was visiting Miss Mary Louise Littleton across the road when Richard Thomas, 9, and Elizabeth, 8, ran to the Littleton home to tell their mother their house was afire.

With Miss Littleton's brothers, George and William, Mrs. Thomas rushed across the road.

The door was broken down but the heat was so intense no one could enter, neighbors said.

Mrs. Thomas smashed a side window and tried to climb in, but the Littleton brothers held her back.

She was in Casualty Hospital last night with severe cuts and second-degree burns of the arms.

British Divorce Rate Booms Faster Than America's

LONDON, Sept. 10 (U.P.).—The United States long has been regarded from this side of the Atlantic as a land of cocktail party infidelities, quickie divorces and numerous remarriages but Europe's divorce rate today is booming far faster than America's.

And Great Britain is leading the field with divorces up some 500 percent compared to figures before World War II, despite some of the strictest divorce laws in the world.

A survey snows that more people still get divorces in the States—some 25 divorces per 10,000 population—but almost every nation of western Europe is narrowing the gap, with Britain, Germany and Sweden in the lead.

Sociologists say the reason for the upsurge is mostly monetary.

Faulty Corneas Replaced

Eye Grafts Can Bring Sight to Thousands

(This is the first in a series of six articles which tell in personal, human terms of the remarkable progress made recently in treatment of the blind and deaf. Miss Barrington is a magazine and newspaper writer whose own sight was saved by a recent operation. These articles were read and approved by recognized authorities.)

By Kay Barrington

CHAPTER ONE

The room was brilliantly lighted, but to the boy on the operating table everything was black. His sight had been stopped at its source by an infection which scarred the corneas of his eyes. Tom had been blind for 10 years.

Any second now, the surgeon would cut away the clouded corneas an slip a priceless piece of corneal tissue, like a clear little window, into its place. One side of the boy's face was numb from a local anesthetic, but he could feel the other side smiling.

It had been just 17 minutes since Tom entered the operating room. People said sight was wonderful. You could look at a face and see it looking back at you . . . you could get a job . . .

Another minute passed.

"Doctor!" he cried. "Doctor! I can SEE!"

Thanks to a Dead Woman

Tom's operation translated into reality a dream as old as man. He could see again . . . thanks to a dead woman he never knew. His affliction was not unusual; eye surgeons estimate that the corneal graft operation could restore sight to 10 or 15 thousand Americans.

Our corneas are tiny pieces of tissue, no longer or thicker than dimes, which curve in front of the irises and pupils of our eyes. Light flashes through them, and the swift, complicated mechanism of our sight begins.

When injury or disease clouds the cornea, blindness results. The clouded portion must be cut away and replaced with a piece of clear, healthy cornea tissue. The new cornea is taken from another human eye, usually immediately after death.

The Eye-Bank for Sight Restoration, Inc., in New York City, is largely responsible for bringing sight to people like Tom. Five years ago, only 15 American surgeons were experienced in corneal grafting. The few eyes then donated by people near death could be preserved for only 48 hours.

Patients who need corneas, as well as donors, were scattered throughout the country. But, the surgeons were concentrated in a few large cities. When an eye became available, the problem was to get it, the surgeon and the patient together in time.

The Eye-Bank was founded in 1945. It was sponsored by Dr. R. Townley Paton, surgeon director at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, and Mrs. Aida de Acosta Breckinridge, its present executive director.

They were determined to interest more donors and to develop methods for collection and distribution of fresh eyes on a national scale.

The trickle of eyes received the first year was enough to serve six physicians. Now, only five years later, more than 100 leading hospitals throughout the country are Eye-Bank depositories. Twenty-four surgeons in every part of America use its facilities. More than 1500 eyes have been processed—450 last year alone. These tremendous strides are the result of a staggering amount of detail work and education of the public.

Occasionally, an eye is removed from a living person for reasons not affecting the cornea.

Usually, however, eyes are removed, by prior agreement, after the donor's death. Many Americans, realizing the importance of their healthy corneas, provide in their wills or by bequest to a hospital for their eyes to be removed after death and given to an eye-bank.

Upon collecting the eyes, cooperating hospitals rush them to the nearest Eye-Bank by Red Cross Motor Corps or by air. At the eye-bank, doctors and laboratory men make complete examinations of the eyes and attend to their preservation.

Perfect corneas are distributed to qualified surgeons for suitable cases. The surgeon then informs the first patient on his list who, with pounding heart, answers the call to rush to the hospital.

One Cornea Serves Three

A good cornea, received from a person known to be free from infectious diseases, is healthy and transparent. Age, sex, race and blood type make no difference, nor does any visual defect not affesting the cornea. One good cornea can be used to restore sight to three blind eyes, and the preservation period has been extended to 72 hours.

It is estimated that 10,000 blind Americans could be made to see again through a cornea graft operation.

The Eye-Bank has made three other important contrfibutions to our seeing welfare:

It supports the Eye-Bank Laboratory which, under the direction of Dr. H. M. Katzin, carries on continuous research in the problems of the corneal operation.

It sponsors teh only weekly Corneal Clinic in the United States. This clinic, held at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, draws a capacity attendance, not only from all over the United States but from foreign countries as well. Many foreign governments finance the transportation of patients to the Clinic.

It sponsors a training course for doctors anxious to improve their knowledge and skill in corneal graft surgery. This concentrated course makes it possible for doctors to observe and perform corneal operations in the laboratory.

In its fifth year, the Eye-Bank for Sight Restoration has two hard problems:

1. A steady supply of eyes is desperately needed as well as more money from the public.

2. Demands upon the Eye-Bank for help have been so great that little attention could be given to its financial security.

Now that the Eye-Bank has become a vital part of the war of medical science against blindness, funds are urgently needed.

Tuesday: Twenty thousand Americans will "go blind" this year.

The Girls Feel Guilty About Daylight TV

By John Crosby

(Mr. Crosby here gives expanded treatment to an item carried recently in this space)

JUST WHAT to do about day-time television is a real knotty problem. And now along comes Dr. Ernest Dichter with a psychological study of the American housewife, presumably the largest and virtually the only day-time audience. The study—merely a pilot study, Dr. Dichter emphasizes — indicates the problem may be even tougher than the boys may have realized.

CROSBY

Dr. Dichter, a psychological consultant for a good many huge corporations, specializes in finding out, not so much what people think, but why they think as they do. Up to now, there has been a good deal of idle speculation as to when the girls will find time to look at day-time television and get their household chores done.

Superficial observation, declares Dr. Dichter, confirms the idea that the housewives haven't time for both television and housework. Most of the housewives interviewed stated immediately that they didn't have the time for it. Probing a little deeper, Dr. Dichter discovered that the girls were finding time for day-time television anyhow. The fact is the little woman wants to maintain her standing as the "sacrificing" and "harassed" housewife. It would be rather difficut to maintain the role of a woman at her wit's end with work if she spent half the day staring, entranced, at a 16-inch screen.

"BEHIND the alleged rejection of present day-time programs, we found an interesting psychological aspect. There was definite evidence that housewives were viewing them." Surreptitiously, I assume. We may be creating a whole body of secret television-lookers who operate like secret drinkers, getting a quick belt of the stuff in the morning after the kids have left for school, then slipping away slyly the rest of the day.

Most women, Dr. Dichter found, rejected programs of pure entertainment because they felt guilty about wasting their time when they should be at the ironing board. At the same time, the girls didn't want housewife programs, where presumably they are usefully employed learning household and cooking tips, because "it emphasizes a role which women of today cannot easily accept.

"The modern woman resents being looked upon merely as a housewife. She wants to be sure that she is recognized as a potential competitor in the social, economic and political activities of the world."

I'M GLAD it's not my problem. I can't, for example, think of any different hours for women to shop and cook and rest than the present ones. The evening, perhaps? Then they'd miss Milton Berle. Of course, there's the middle of the night when the TV stations are off the air in which case they'd have to give up their long-established habit of sleeping.

I'm sure the advertiser, with all the little tricks he knows, could easily eradicate the feeling of guilt, could persuade the housewife that housework was a monstrous imposition in the first place and that she should just let the dirt pile up, relax and enjoy herself.

But then who'd buy the soap that sponsors the entertainment? As I say, I'm glad it's not my problem.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Gold is on vacation. His column today takes the form of a letter to his managing editor.

Dear Boss:

School is starting soon. I'm running out of clean shirts, and we're all getting a bit weary of packing, unpacking and traveling. Besides, my money is running out.

So we've decided to head for home, after one more day of sightseeing.

After a bang up day at the Canadian National Exhibition, we went downtown to sample Toronto's food. We ate at the Letros Restaurant on King st., and got fine meals at reasonable prices—no extra charge for the flies.

There's a fancier Letros up the street a block or so, and we found out later that it serves the same food in classier surroundings (at higher prices) with a great play from the tourist trade. By dumb luck we had stumbled into the right place.

Incidentally, Yonge st., which looks like the main stem, is pretty well torn up these days. For several blocks, it's closed off completely, and for at least a mile from the waterfront we rode along on a wooden street, of all things.

Investigation reveals that Toronto is building a five-mile-long subway that won't be finished until perhaps 1954. Where the excavation work is finished, steel girders have been put in place across the top, and covered with wooden planking to permit Yonge st. traffic to move in normal fashion until the paving contractors are ready to give the big ditch the finishing touches.

Wherever we've gone, we've found this same preoccupation with new subways, new bridges, new express highways, and traffic (and parking) problems in general.

I used to think Washington had a monopoly on such troubles, but I guess most big cities find themselves in the same boat. People—and business houses—are moving out into the suburbs wherever authorities have failed to solve downtown traffic problems.

An editorial in a local paper makes an interesting reference to an experiment in Vancouver, where businessmen have purchased five lots to accommodate shoppers.

They charge 10 cents for the first hour, 15 cents for the second, and 25 cents for each additional hour—the exact opposite of the usual technique of charging the biggest fee for the first hour. You see, they're not operating the lots to make money, but to attract shoppers. And they want to make these facilities too expensive for the all-day parker.

What the all-day parker is supposed to do with his car remains an interesting question for speculation.

Speaking of newspapers and Vancouver reminds me of a startling story I bumped into as we checked out of our hotel in Hamilton.

Across the street is the office of the Hamilton Spectator, and I noticed a picket parading up and down in front of it. I couldn't resist a bit of shop talk.

"We've been on strike for better than four years," the picket told me. "When the printers struck in Vancouver, the local union struck here. But the Spectator hired non-union printers and when Vancouver settled, our strike just kept right on going."

"Gee whiz," I gee whizzed, "what happens now?"

"You tell me," he shrugged. "We're still walking this picket line."

About an hour later we came to the Canadian side of Niagara Falls.

I'm not going to bore you with a description of the Falls, boss. If you want to know what they're like, you can get a professional account out of one of those big books in our library.

We took some pictures of the Canadian side, then crossed the Rainbow Bridge to the United States. The Canadian guards asked us whether we still had our radio, cameras and typewriter and didn't even open our trunk to check. The American guards asked whether we were bringing in anything bought in Canada and I said yes, we had one bottle of Scotch and a small bottle of perfume I had gotten for Bernice.

"Less than $25?" he asked. "Okay, that's all. Welcome home."

The whole thing took 60 seconds. The bridge toll was 30 cents—half what it cost to enter Canada from Detroit.

On the American side, Walter suggested that we climb out onto some rocks above the falls to take color movies, and then go below to shoot the other angle. So we did—and got properly drenched.

We were okay above the falls, because nobody slipped into the river, as I was sure we would. But below, my 14-year-old wasn't satisfied to shoot through the window of the shelter house. He had to clamber out on the rocks for a more dramatic shot, and, of course, it was my paternal duty to go along.

The spray appears to be a thin mist from a distance, but you can take my word for it, boss, that it's a driving downpour when you get anywhere near it. We both got soaked, and exchanged gezundheits all the way home.

I guess by the time you get this we'll be back in Washington. We're stopping tonight at the Livingston Hotel, in Avon, N. Y., and should have an easy drive in to the District tomorrow.

Bill.

P. S. I wish you could see our hotel room. The "bathroom" sets in one corner, set off by a white cloth hung on a rod, and the ancient brass bed has a middle-sag that promises to give us an interesting night of trying to sleep on an incline. Walter took one look at the place and muttered: "George Washington would have slept here except he preferred something more modern."

Truman Letters Harass His Staff

By Drew Pearson

Behind the President's apology to the Marine Corps was some Dutch-uncle talking by Chairman Bill Boyle of the Democratic National Committee, Attorney General McGrath and Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate.

Melvin A. Maas

At first, Truman refused to recant. He was mad as blazes about newspaper criticism of his remarks—which he felt was inspired by Republicans — and about the deluge of irate telegrams flooding the White House.

It was only after Boyle, McGrath, and Biffle argued for some time that he finally dictated the letter of apology to Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Marine Corps commandant.

Boyle bluntly told Truman that his criticism of the Marines, however well-intentioned, might defeat a number of Democrats in November. The President was also advised that the Marine Corps League, then convened in Washington, was prepared to adopt a blistering resolution of condemnation. In fact, delegates were clamoring to adopt this resolution even when Commandant Clay Nixon assured them that Truman would retract, and were only quieted down after a stirring appeal by former Congressman Mel Maas of Minnesota, a former Marine reserve officer.

"This is not a question of the survival of the Marine Corps," Maas told the delegates. "We are fighting another war, and it is a question of whether civilization will be destroyed right in front of our eyes. We've got to put loyalty to the United States above personal squabbles. Let's concentrate on preserving both the United States and the United States Marine Corps."

Other Letters

Members of the White House staff are holding their breath for fear some of the other tart, impetuous letters Truman has written will now leak out. For, during the past five years H. S. T. has been writing pungent, profane paragraphs to various Senators on all sorts of subjects.

Fortunately, most were written to old friends who have kept the letters as souvenirs. The Marine Corps letter, being written to a Republican, was promptly used by him. But the White House staff has been in mortal terror that some of the other unprintable letters will now see the light of day.

A lot of people have asked why the President writes these letters.

One reason is that as a Senator, Mr. Truman got into the habit of personally answering his mail. He believed that every constituent had a right to get a personal reply from him, and he has kept this up as far as members of Congress are concerned since he entered the White House. No official censor reads his mail after it is dictated.

Members of the official family have tried this but it doesn't pay. For the President resents opposition—as the late Bob Hannegan, who ended up in the doghouse, found out.

Byrnes, Baruch Clashes

While the President doesn't go off on these tangents often, when he does, they are beauts. Furthermore, he doesn't forget and forgive easily. And the results are usually more costly to him than to the other fellow.

His feud with Jimmie Byrnes, for instance, which could easily have been avoided, has cost the President the support of most of the State of South Carolina. Byrnes ran for Governor largely to get even with his old chief in the White House, and it doesn't pay for any President to have a man of Jimmie Byrnes' stature vigorously out to get him.

The caustic letter which Truman wrote to Bernard Baruch after Baruch refused to serve on a committee to reelect the President is understandable. But it hurt the President far more than it has hurt Baruch; for the aged "adviser-to-Presidents" not only carries national prestige, but worked backstage through Senator Byrd to block the President's old friend, Mon Wallgren, for the chairmanship of the National Security Resources Board.

Of course, it should also be remembered that the President is an artilleryman, with an artilleryman's "love" for the Marines. But even so, here's hoping Mr. Truman will appoint a stenographic copy-reader, just as I and every newspaper employ one or more copy-readers, to tone down his letters in time of war.
